Party Breach In Kentucky Fails to Yield To President

Happy Chandler Guest on Train

State Democratic Feud Blow to Harmony; Leaders Bitter.

By the Associated Press.

En Route With President Roosevelt to the Pacific Coast, Sept. 27.—President Roosevelt journeyed over the rain-swept prairies of the Middle West tonight after a round of talks with political leaders which brought him smack into a Democratic feud in old Kentucky, having a vital State election this year.

Traveling along the Ohio River border line of Kentucky, Mr. Roosevelt received and gave obvious indorsement to Lieut. Gov. L. B. Chandler, Democratic gubernatorial candidate for Kentucky.

But Gov. Laffoon and his defeated candidate for the Democratic nomination, Thomas S. Rhea, declined invitations to come aboard and harmony for the present, at least, seemed unaccomplished. Senator Barkley left the train with Chandler at North Vernon, Ind., to sound the call to arms in the lone off-State election of the year, after the talk with the President. He predicted a Democratic victory.

After his talk with the Kentuckians, the President received Indiana leaders headed by Gov. McNutt, who rode with him across the State from North Vernon to Vincennes.

President Greets Crowds.

In genial spirits, Mr. Roosevelt appeared on the rear platform to greet crowds at the few stops along the way. Aside from informal "Hello!" exchanges he refrained from talks. Mrs. Roosevelt was at his side on such occasions and accepted flowers from the rain-spattered admirers.

After the talk with the President, Chandler said he was confident of general support of the State for the Democratic ticket.

Asked about the declination of Rhea to board the presidential train, Chandler replied "there is no way of explaining the Rhea telegram," but declined further comment at the suggestion of Senator Barkley.

"The people of Kentucky are not only for the State Democratic ticket," asserted Senator Barkley, "but they are for President Roosevelt and his whole program."

He expressed hope the President could visit Kentucky, but doubted this could be accomplished before the election.

Farmers' Talk Planned.

Heading across Ohio, Indiana and Illinois today, President Roosevelt journeyed tonight into Nebraska, home State of Senator Norris, veteran Republican insurgent and friend of Mr. Roosevelt. At Fremont, Nebr., tomorrow, the President will talk to a gathering of farmers on a regional radio broadcast set-up. Observers look for some remarks on the AAA.

Other speeches will follow at Boulder Canyon Dam, Los Angeles, and San Diego.

Couzens Feels 'Grand,' Off for Home Today

Rochester, Minn., Sept. 27 (AP).—Senator James Couzens, of Michigan, feeling "grand," he said, and "100 per cent improved" since he came here July 6, plans to leave for home tomorrow.

An 8-pound gain in weight the last ten days, and the triumphs of Joe Louis and the Detroit Tigers contributed to Couzens' cheerful outlook. Couzens, who underwent four operations, will be accompanied to Detroit by his wife. He restricted political comment to a prediction the United States would not enter any war, "whether we have neutrality legislation or not."

The American people, he said, won't consent to it.

Lyn King, St. Louis outfielder, is shown being forced out at home on Herman's throw to Catcher Gabby Hartnett in the first inning of the game which decided the pennant race in St. Louis yesterday. The Cards scored two runs in that inning, but the Cubs smashed Dizzy Dean to a 6-2 defeat.

Tropical Storm Heads forCuba; Natives Fearful

Entire Island IsThreatened as Hurricane Moves Northward.

By the Associated Press.

Havana, Sept. 27.—The entire island of Cuba was threatened by a hurricane tonight.

Observers sounded storm warnings to all points of the country, especially along the south coast from Matanzas city to the eastern tip of the island.

Belen observatory located a storm of great intensity 230 miles south of Cienfuegos at 11 a. m. (E. S. T.), moving north and northeast. Observatory meteorologists said the course seemed more north than east.

"We do not expect the storm to reach Cuba tonight," it was said there, "but it might strike the south coast in the early morning hours. There is slight danger to Pinar del Rio and Havana provinces, but serious danger to Matanzas, Santa Clara, Camaguey and Oriente provinces."

Warning of danger to navigation on both coasts of Cuba was sounded by the observatory.

Cubans expressed alarm when informed that the present disturbance is following almost the exact path of the disastrous hurricane of November 9, 1932, which destroyed 98 per cent of the small coast town of Santa Cruz del Sur and caused the loss of several thousand lives.

Based on the Belen observatory's calculations, the storm at 11 a. m. was 425 miles south and slightly east of Key West, Fla.

Agents Jail Man In Bremer Case

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Sept. 27.—Cassius M. McDonald, who for years has maintained a luxuriously appointed residence in one of Detroit's most fashionable Lake Front suburbs, sat in a jail cell here tonight on a charge he arranged for disposal of $72,000 of the $200,000 ransom money paid the kidnapers of Edward G. Bremer, St. Paul banker.

McDonald, 52, gray-haired and expensively dressed, is held in default of $100,000 bond. He was arrested after Federal agents here had been notified a warrant for his arrest had been issued in St. Paul. A removal hearing was set for October 8 by a United States commissioner.

Last January, a year after the Bremer kidnaping, McDonald was indicted in Miami, Fla., a Federal grand jury on a charge of harboring Alvin Karpis, now Public Enemy No. 1. Karpis and his lieutenant, Harry Campbell, are the only principal suspects in the Bremer case who now are at large.

Cubs Win Flag as They Beat Cardinals Twice for 21st Game

Chicagoans Leap on Dizzy Dean for Victory That Dethrones World Champions in Their Own Lot; Lindstrom, Hack Lead Assault.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Sept. 27.—Hang up the warning signs in Detroit jungleland. The rampaging Cubs are on their way, with leveled sights that can't seem to miss. Rising to the very crest of baseball greatness and Dean with a final, devastating, 15-hit barrage, the sensational men of Grimm capped their almost unbelievable drive today by battering the St. Louis Cardinals, 6 to 2, for their twentieth straight victory and the National League pennant.

The triumph which drove the final nail to clinch the flag few dreamed they would win last July 6, when they started their spectacular comeback from fourth place—10½ games behind the then pace-setting New York Giants—was all the new champions needed to end their glorious march, putting them five games up and only three games to go over the fallen world's champions.

But the decisive way they did it, with a comeback, hits to throw away and almost uncanny fielding drew on the admiration of the half-frozen 9,000 fans that shivered throughout the game, the first of a useless double-header.

But their amazing rush didn't stop even there. They went out to run their string to 21 in a row by winning the second game, 5 to 3. Represented by several substitutes, the Cardinals hopped on the veteran Charlie Root for a three-run lead in the sixth inning, but the irrepressible Cubs came back to tie the score in the seventh and go on to win in the ninth on successive triples by Phil Cavarretta and Hack and a single by Jurges. Root allowed but three hits in six innings. Henshaw gave only one.

Face to face with the one and only Dizzy Dean, a 28-game winner with a smirk of invincibility on his lips, the Cubs spotted the great right-hander a two-run lead in the first inning with two singles, a walk and two errors. They let Dizzy Roll along with what everyone thought might be an unsurmountable lead until the third inning.

Then they tied the score, moved up their heavy artillery and smashed the great one's offerings to bits. As Big Bill Lee shackled them the rest of the journey with four hits for his twentieth triumph of the campaign, the "Grim Reaper" mowed along with such deadly, monotonous precision that it went ahead in the fourth inning and couldn't be stalled.

Producer Brady Claims Son's Body

Woman to Be Questioned on Fatal Fire.

By the Associated Press.

Colts Neck, N. J., Sept. 27.—William A. Brady, sr., the theatrical producer, came to Colts Neck today and tearfully took possession of the charred remains of his son William's body, found in the ruins of a fire-swept three-room cottage.

"I knew the minute I heard of it last night what had happened," Brady told Chief of Detectives Charles Tate. He explained to Prosecutor T. Raymond Bazley that his son, himself a theatrical producer, had a habit of falling asleep in bed with a lighted cigarette in his hands, and said he had frequently suffered burns.

The prosecutor expects to interview Miss Elise Chisholm, owner of the cottage. Young Brady had spent the summer at the New Jersey seashore, where he had shared with Miss Chisholm the management of the Casino players at Deal. He had borrowed the cottage from Miss Chisholm and had expected to return to New York shortly.

He was the son of Grace George, the actress, and step-brother of Alice Brady, Broadway and Hollywood star. His widow, Katherine Alexander, is a motion-picture actress.

Orr's Sailboat Wins Prelude ToCupRegatta

Reis, 3-Time Winner, Out of President's Trophy Race Today.

Washington's greatest water carnival, the 1935 President's Cup Regatta, was launched yesterday with an innovation—an entire day of sailboat races. The night program was featured by an illuminated night pageant and reception to visiting yachtsmen at the Corinthian Yacht Club.

Today, the regatta will turn to high-powered speed boats, with particular emphasis on the first heat of the President's Cup race for which the regatta is named, and in which a new champion is bound to be crowned. That a new champion will be declared was made certain late last night when George Reis, three-time winner of the race, made an eleventh-hour withdrawal.

Reis was forced to withdraw his El Lagarto, the famed "Leaping Lizard," which had been so successful in the Gold Cup and President's Cup races, because motor trouble developed just before he was to have left his headquarters at Lake George, N. Y., for Washington.

The action today will start at 10:30 in the morning, when owners of the fastest craft in this country will send their boats scurrying between the Highway Bridge and Key Bridge in the mile trials, which are scheduled to last until 1 p. m.

Starting at the same time, the out-

Woman Held As Ax Killer In Maryland

Professor's Wife Jailed After Mother-in-Law's Body Found Hacked.

Apartment's Owner Says Accused Admitted Crime to Her.

By the Associated Press.

Chestertown, Md., Sept. 27.—The 30-year-old wife of a young Washington College chemistry professor was in jail here tonight, named by a coroner's jury as the slayer of her 68-year-old mother-in-law.

Less than seven hours after the hacked body of Mrs. Effie Buxton was found in her apartment, a coroner's jury held that the elderly woman came to her death at the hands of Mrs. Thelma Buxton, her daughter-in-law.

One of the witnesses was Dr. H. G. Simpers, Chestertown physician, who testified that about two months ago he treated Mrs. Thelma Buxton for a melancholy condition.

Matron Watches Prisoner.

Following the hearing, State's Attorney Stephen Collins said Mrs. Buxton would be held without bail. She was described as highly nervous, and a jail matron was kept with her constantly.

The crime occurred about 8:30 a. m. The victim's head was badly beaten, three fingers of her left hand were nearly severed and her shoulders and left arm mangled by repeated blows. A small hatchet was found near by.

Dr. Kenneth Buxton, her son, was at the college for an 8 o'clock class at the time. He went to his wife when notified.

The only statement Mrs. Buxton made was to Mrs. Lewin Wickes, widow of Judge Lewin Wickes, of the Kent County Circuit Court, and owner of the apartment house in which the slaying occurred.

Admitted Crime, Says Witness.

Mrs. Wickes testified she came to her apartment about 9 a. m. and asked that she call the sheriff.

The witness said she was asked "what is the matter?" and was told only that "I want you to call the sheriff quickly."

She called Sheriff John H. Bennett, and then Mrs. Buxton said:

"I have killed Mrs. Buxton."

Mrs. Wickes said she asked if she should call a doctor and Mrs. Buxton replied:

"No, she is entirely dead. I knew she was dead when I left."

Later, in the Wickes apartment, the witnes said, Mrs. Buxton stated:

"I have done it. I will take my punishment. I shall probably hang."

Heard Groans, He Testifies.

The only other witness before the jury was R. H. Collins, occupant of the apartment above that of the Buxtons. He testified that about 8:30 a. m. he heard thumping noises and groans coming from the apartment below.

Three months ago the elder Mrs. Buxton gave up her own apartment to live with her son and daughter-in-law.

Paralysis Victim Dies After Year in Iron Lung

Spokane, Wash., Sept. 27 (AP).—Plucky Fred Betlach, 15-year-old infantile paralysis victim, died unexpectedly today at his home after spending a year and two days in an "iron lung."

He had improved so markedly in recent weeks that he was able to spend a few hours each day outside the respirator and Tuesday said confidently he would be "playing football next fall."

His case attracted widespread interest. He received hundreds of letters, some from as far away as China. Friends sent him thousands of stamps for his collection.

Dr. L. J. Bailey, of Millwood, who had been attending the boy, said "too many brain cells" had been destroyed by the paralysis.

League Is Likely To Ask U. S. Aid Upon Sanctions

Air Train Is Flown 1,170 Miles by Women

Koktabel, Crimea, U. S. S. R., Sept. 27 (AP).—An air-train made up of a plane and three gliders operated entirely by women arrived today after a flight of 1,950 kilometers (about 1,170 miles) from Leningrad.

Pilot Vera Zylenkova set a world record for feminine glider pilots, remaining aloft with a passenger in the vicinity of Koktabel 8 hours and 22 minutes.

It was announced from Leningrad today that a new 18-passenger glider has been tested successfully and would be used in a passenger air-train.

U. S. Silences Rumor of Aid For the League

Will Take No Part in Plan to Punish Violators of Geneva Covenant.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Veiled suggestions from abroad that this Government might give its approval to League of Nations action in the Italo-Ethiopian dispute or might have a hand in punishing violators of the Geneva Covenant yesterday were received here with official silence.

But informally it was made clear that this Government will take no active part whatever in the Italo-Ethiopian situation, or in any other European situation which may develop out of it, beyond steps regarded as necessary to protect distinct American interests.

Foremost among the American interests is keeping this country out of war. Consequently, while action taken to promote that end might assist or make easier the application of punitive measures against a violator of the League Covenant, it will not be inspired or taken for the latter purpose.

U. S. Will Not Take Part.

Thus it may be reliably stated that if anyone at Geneva or elsewhere in Europe believes that affirmative help may be expected from the United States, he is deluding himself. Unforeseen contingencies might change this attitude, but that is a possibility of the distant future and does not apply to the present European situation, it was contended.

Meanwhile the State Department settled back for a period of "watchful waiting" to see whether Benito Mussolini would have the hardihood to defy the League Council's warning of Thursday not to proceed against Ethiopia until three months after it promulgated its report on the situation.

Dispatches from London reporting that two British newspapers announced the British foreign office was preparing to notify this government that it could no longer be bound by the London Naval Treaty and would embark on a big naval building program caused a flurry of excitement in official quarters here, but the report was soon discounted.

Statement by Roosevelt.

Nevertheless it was taken with sufficient seriousness to draw a statement from President Roosevelt at his semiweekly press conference aboard his train speeding to San Diego. Indicating that the President attached some importance to what he was saying he gave permission for a direct quotation.

"The American naval building policy is precisely and without

'Tacit' Backing on Any Action Against Italy May Be Sought.

Embargo on Arms Is Vital Question

Resolution Suggesting Nonmember Help Is Cited at Geneva.

The Crisis Abroad.

Delegates at Geneva believed it probable that if sanctions were applied against Italy the United States would be asked to aid.

An official spokesman in Rome said Italy, although believing Ethiopian tribesmen may "attack," would keep an unofficial two weeks' truce in case nothing "happens."

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Sept. 27.—A request for at least the tacit co-operation of the United States in any eventual League sanctions against Italy was believed tonight in League circles to be more and more probable.

A resolution adopted by the Assembly in 1921 interpreting a punitive article of the Covenant was receiving particular attention. This resolution, which suggests that sanctions may be progressive, stresses the desirability of collaboration with countries which are not members of the League.

This possibility arose after the Council, meeting as a committee of the whole, granted in effect Ethiopia's request that League observers be sent there to bear witness that the Emperor's troops will not instigate aggression.

Haile Selassie will be asked what form he would like this body of observers to take. An aerial patrol to fly over the frontier has been suggested unofficially.

Great Britain, it is known, attaches especial importance to the 1921 resolution involving participation of nonmembers in sanctions.

The measure suggests that the different States could contribute to sanctions in accordance with their ability, their importance and their geographical position.

Look to France, Britain.

Officials explained that under it the peculiar position of states that are neighbors of Italy, such as Austria and Switzerland, could be taken into consideration. The great powers, like Britain, France and Russia, would naturally be expected to bear the main burden of sanctions.

In this connection, a report by the Foreign Policy Association of the United States issued by the Geneva Research Center today suggested active or passive co-operation by the United States in five of the League's six possible sanctions against Italy.

The report, by Raymond Leslie Buell, president of the Foreign Policy Association, said President Roosevelt under the neutrality act could associate himself with these measures: Withdrawal of diplomatic representatives from Rome; non-recognition of any situation created by Italy in Ethiopia in violation of the League Covenant and the Pact of Paris; an embargo on the exports of munitions, and implements of war to Italy; a League blocade of Italy to the extent of acquiescing to such a blockade; and fifth, the closing of the Suez Canal.

A striking provision of the 1921 resolution is that it says it may become advisable, in order to establish an effective blockade of the ports of the Covenant-breaking state, to entrust execution of blockade operations to some member of the League.

In other words, League officials

Roger Peacock Beats Greene To Take District Golf Crown

By Dave Herman.

Roger Peacock, odds-on-favorite, came through with a display of championship golf yesterday, defeating Hickman Greene, Manor challenger, 3 and 2, in the finals of the District championship at Washington Golf and Country Club.

The bronzed Indian Spring ace, who set the pace with a blistering 68 in the medal round Wednesday, played 16 holes in one over par to regain the crown he first won in 1932 at Chevy Chase.

Peacock was not so sure he was going to be a finalist during his semifinals with Levi Yoder, a teammate from Indian Spring, for Yoder, after a desperate battle, lost by one up.

Greene didn't have such a tight morning match, eliminating Tommy Webb, jr., long-driving host club golfer, 5 and 3.

After holding Peacock even for 13 holes Greene cracked under the strain and Roger finished 3-3-4, one under par, to win the last three holes.

Peacock won seven holes, four of them birdies. He was complete

2 A. M. Rule in Nearby Virginia To Close Early Morning Oases

The practice of going over the river to nearby Virginia for "another one" after Washington's bars have closed at 2 a. m., was ended yesterday by the Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board in Richmond.

The board ordered beer and wine taverns in Arlington County and Alexandria to close their establishments not later than 2 a. m., except on Saturdays, when the closing hour will be midnight. These hours are the same as those in the District of Columbia.

Heretofore the Virginia control board has left closing hours to local authorities. It departed from this policy after a hearing in which three licensed places in nearby Virginia were charged with being scenes of disorderly conduct, allegedly because of an influx of Washingtonians after the District closing hour of 2 a. m.

The board did not revoke the licenses of the offending places.

The order requiring places in Arlington County and Alexandria to close at 2 a. m., the board said, was justified by their proximity to a city of half a million population. It did not represent, the board added, any general change in the policy of allowing local authorities to fix closing hours.

Three Officials Quit as Berry Takes NRA Job

Leaders Cite Confusion as to Authority of New Co-ordinator.

By the Associated Press.

Three key NRA officials were disclosed to have resigned yesterday on the heels of the appointment of Maj. George L. Berry to an apparently dominant position in the old Blue Eagle organization.

Prentiss L. Coonley, head of the division of business co-operation, said he intended to re-enter private business. Willard Thorp, economic adviser to the NRA advisory council, will leave Monday to join the Dun & Bradstreet organization.

A third ojcial also is leaving, but his identity was not made public immediately. Coonley said Berry's appointment as "co-ordinator of industrial co-operation" by President Roosevelt Thursday night had nothing to do with his resignation, while associates said Thorp's leaving had been arranged some time ago.

Others May Step Out.

Several other men high in the NRA setup, however, said privately they were considering resigning, and there were strong indications of a wholesale exodus within a few weeks.

Official comment on the Beery appointment was not forthcoming, but some major officials indicated privately they felt the President's executive order naming Berry was not clear, and that they did not know what Berry's powers would be.

The President ordered, among other things, that Berry "co-ordinate and report" on duties, compensations and function of NRA officials. Whether "co-ordinate" meant Berry was to have final authority over L. J. Martin, present administrator, and Leon C. Marshall, economic research chief, was not immediately determined.

Martin to Remain.

Martin said he was not "leaving the Administration at present," and associates of Marshall said he intended to await developments.

The Federal Trade Commission, under another Executive order, moved to put into effect the first of its trade-practice conference rules. Labor provisions in these must be submitted through Berry to President Roosevelt. The wholesale tobacco industry is expected to receive the first commission cdoe.

NRA's morale, which, officials concede, has been steadily slipping for weeks, took another slump in the face of what was characterized as new uncertainty.

Pipe Line Firm Wins Virginia Tax Refund

Richmond, Va., Sept. 27 (AP).—The Virginia Gas Transmission Corporation will receive a $24,180 refund in taxes paid on a 201-mile pipe line crossing Virginia from Allegheny to Fairfax County, as the result of a ruling by the State Corporation Commission today holding the State pipe-line tax of 1934 invalid insofar as the Virginia corporation is concerned.

The corporation protested the levy on the grounds that its business is wholly interstate in character and so is not subject to taxation in Virginia.

mary fight, flatly refused today to confer with President Roosevelt on his specitl train.

Only Lieut. Gov. A. B. "Happy" Chandler, who defeated Rhea for the nomination as governor in the recent runoff primary, accepted the White House Invitation to board the President's train at Cincinnati and ride with him through southern Indiana.

Laffoon and Rhea, who in the past have acclaimed the President as "our matchless leader," were invited to meet with Chandler on the Presidential train on the eve of the opening of the Democratic gubernatorial campaign at Lawrencemurg tomorrow. Rhea, in a sharply worded answer to Marvin H. McIntyre, the President's secretary, charged that his political foes had raised "barriers" against him at the White House and added, "It is not my desire to break down or lower the barriers thus raised against me."

Laffoon Explains Absence.

Gov. Laffoon, explaining late today why he rejected the invitation, said, "It has been currently reported and widely circulated that the co-operation of the Governor of Kentucky is not desired by the Chandler managers as his victory in November would be more convincing without the support of the Democratic State administration. The statement was made from every forum in Kentucky that no candidate for President in 1936 could afford to indorse the record of the Laffoon administration and that the President desired the nomination of Chandler for Governor of Kentucky."

Gov. Laffoon announced that he would not attend Chandler's campaign opening.

In the primary campaign, Chandler claimed that the nomination of Rhea would mean defeat for Kentucky Democrats in November and imperil the re-election of Mr. Roosevelt next year. Chandler, attacking Laffoon's and Rhea's championship of the State sales tax law, promised to repeal it. Rhea, who defended the sales tax, accused Chandler of demagoguery in promising to repeal the tax. Rhea also campaigned as a Roosevelt supporter, asserting he was one of the floor managers that engineered Mr. Roosevelt's nomination at the Chicago convention.

Rhea charged in his reply to the White House invitation that Robert W. Bingham, Ambassador to England; McIntyre, the President's secretary, and others had caused the White House doors to be "closed to me and my friends for the past several months."

change what it has been during the past two years and a half, that is, to bring the Navy up to the strength provided for in the Washington and London treaties," the President stated. "This program carried out in accordance with acts of Congress will bring the United States Navy up to treaty strength by 1942.

"The United States adheres to the Washington and London treaties. Only a failure to renew these treaties or a renunciation of these treaties could change American policy, and then only in the event that other nations exceeded the treaty limits."

To Review Naval Show.

At the same time the Presidential secretariat revealed that Mr. Roosevelt before starting on his vacation-fishing trip next Wednesday aboard the United States Cruiser Houston will review a demonstration of naval tactics off of San Diego, Calif., in which the Pacific Fleet will participate.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull insisted that no change had taken place in the general naval situation and said he had received no information from Great Britain regarding any change. He said he had been informed by the American Embassy in London that the British government had denied the truth of stories appearing in two British newspapers regarding a desire of the British to be freed of treaty limitations.

said, a blockade against Italy could be entrusted to Great Britain.

The real question worrying members here is whether Italy may continue freely to purchase cotton, oil, scrap iron and other raw materials from the United States, in case of a Geneva embargo against such products.

Overriding an Italian objection, the steering committee of the Assembly voted to recommend that the Assembly adjourn, subject to recall at a moment's notice.

Aloisi Protests.

Baron Pompeo Aloisi, head of the Rome delegation, protested that a simple adjournment instead of a definite close of the session was contrary to the League's constitution. Aloisi said the Assembly is not officially concerned with the dispute, but that it is solely in the hands of the Council.

Sanctions, although not being discussed now, loom very large in the background.

The attitude of Great Britain toward them was said to be entirely unchanged—namely, that Britain approves a strict enforcement of the Covenant, even to the length of sanctions under a punitive article of the Covenant.

Conversations between interested powers, particularly between Britain and France, have even gone so far as to take into consideration the possibility of some form of naval sanctions.

To clarify the position of Britain, British circles gave the Associated Press this statement:

"Neither Great Britain nor any other country can alone take decisions as to sanctions under the Covenant, because this is a matter which rests with the entire League Council.

"The Council as a whole has not yet given any attention to the matter of sanctions because the stage of conciliation is open until the adoption of a report and recommendations under paragraph 4, Article XV of the Covenant."

Typhoon Dead 580 in Japan; Fleet Battered

52 More Swept to Death in Naval Maneuvers; 195 Missing.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Sept. 27.—The Japanese navy met genuine peril in its war maneuvers in the northwest Pacific today when a typhoon which pounded the ships swept 52 officers and men to death.

The 52, all of whom were swept from the warships' decks, were officially listed as missing and were not included in the government's toll of 580 dead, 195 missing and feared dead and 84 injured throughout Japan.

The storm, accompanied by torrential rains, was the same one that devastated the northeastern prefectures of Japan proper earlier in the week, claiming 350 of the total lives lost.

Naval authorities had been warned of the approaching storm and the ships prepared for it. But the mountainous seas and the 78-mile gale struck two destroyers with such force that 52 men were literally knocked from the decks.

An official communique said the destroyer Yugiri lost 27 men and the destroyer Hatsuyuki 24. An aviator was lost from the aircraft carrier Hosho. The destroyers themselves and two sister destroyers were damaged.

Warships circled the scene during today's maneuvers in search of the missing men, but scant hope was held for their recovery. Admiral Mineo Osumi, minister of the navy, reported the disaster to Emperor Hirohito.

The war games were ordered to continue, in accordance with tradition of the navy.

On land it was impossible to ascertain the extent of the storm's damage, although Fumio Goto, the home minister, told the cabinet that 735 houses had been destroyed. Troops were called out for rescue work.

Whalen Son, 14, Found in Wood After Search

Troopers Discover Boy Unconscious From Fall; Thought Kidnaped.

By the Associated Press.

Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., Sept. 27.—Anxiety over the disappearance from home of Grover A. Whalen, jr., 14, son of a former New York City police commissioner, which caused his family to believe he had been kidnaped and sent authorities on a widespread hunt, ended late today, when the youth returned home safely.

He was stunned when he stumbled and struck his head on a rock, while walking in a nearby woods, and was lying in a ravine when officers, led by blood hounds, came upon him eight hours after he disappeared.

"I guess I cracked my head," the youth told State troopers, who, with police and Federal agents were called into the search.

Ran to Mother.

Driven home by the troopers, young Whalen jumped from the car and ran to the arms of his mother. Her husband, now a distillery company executive, boarded an airplane at Syracuse for a fast flight home after learning of his son's disappearance.

The youth was put to bed shortly after his return home and his parents declined to permit him to be disturbed.

State troopers, who came across the boy in the woods, more than a mile from his home, expressed belief he had been unconscious for about five hours.

While waiting for a motor car to take him to a private school this morning, young Whalen decided to find the gardener on his father's estate and tel him good-by.

He wandered into a woods that surround a nearby correctional institution for juveniles and borders on several large estates.

When his disappearance became known and he failed to return, State troopers with bloodhounds were rushed from the barracks at Hawthorne after an alarm was sounded.

United States Agents in Search.

Federal agents from the Department of Justice in New York City arrived to join local police in the search. No general alarm was flashed, however.

Patrick Costello, chief of police here, expressed belief from the start that the youth had wandered into the woods and had become lost.

Despite Costello's statement there was no evidence to show that young Whalen had been kidnaped, members of the boy's family expressed fear the youth might have been abducted. They steadfastly denied reports, however, that a ransom note had been found.

Troopers said the boy was lying in a ravine as if asleep when they came upon him. They carried him to a car and immediately drove him home, where he was put to bed to rest.

Heart of Winchester Is Threatened by Fire

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Sept. 27.—Prompt action by firemen is credited with preventing a serious blaze in the heart of the business section of Winchester early today when two barns, built years ago for livery stables and used recently for storage purposes, were destroyed by a fire of undetermined origin. Six streams of water were played on the fire, which was but a few feet from a laundry and the Loudoun Street Presbyterian Church. Neither of the buildings was damaged.

Italy Will Keep Peace 2 Weeks Unless 'Raided'

Spokesman Believes Troops of Selassie May Swarm Over Border.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Sept. 27.—Italy thinks Ethiopian tribesmen may swarm over the border and make Italy the attacked instead of the attacker, a government spokesman said tonight.

Rome is willing to observe a truce for two weeks "unofficially," he explained, "unless something happens."

"Ethiopians have been the aggressors for 40 years," he said, and sooner or later "there will be other aggressions." Mussolini's army of 250,000 men in or en route to Africa is "ready," the spokesman asserted, while officials here "are still waiting patiently" for the League to do something.

He pointed out the rainy season is at an end in Ethiopia and the ground will soon be dry enough for troops to advance.

May Talk Tomorrow.

Premier Mussolini, in a cabinet meeting tomorrow, may say how long he is willing to wait on the League.

Il Duce may answer the council's stipulation for a three-month truce, some well-informed persons suggested, by declaring that articles of the League Covenant under which Geneva is proceeding have no application to the controversy. Officials, however, foresaw no imminent break with the League.

A government spokesman rejected any idea of Italy's accepting the proposed three months' truce. He said Italy's continued presence at Geneva is a matter of courtesy to the League and in no way alters her position.

There is no reason to suppose, he asserted, that Italy would not delay action in Ethiopia until the Council reports. When that will be, he said, he did not know.

See Control Lacking.

Those Italians who hope frankly for Ethiopian aggression to solve Italy's problem say any mobilization by Emperor Haile Selassie will certainly excite his men. They think the loose control the King of Kings has over distant tribes makes it likely some enthusiastic forces will start when they are ready.

Italy's willingness to remain in Geneva was explained by officials as a desire to show the world "her cause is just."

An officially-inspired editorial in the Giornale d'Italia said: "The Assembly's interference in the Ethiopian conflict would be a practical violation of the Covenant," because the controversy is not on the Assembly's program of business but is exclusively the work of the Council.

Menus Can Be Varied More If Vegetables Used Are Cooked by Different Methods

Many Made More Nourishing By a White or Cheese Sauce

Salt Pork or Bacon Rind Gives Pleasing Flavor to Beans and Blackeyed Peas; Other Plants Can Be Served Raw in Salad Combinations.

By Dorothea Duncan.

No matter how you strive to change your menus by the use of different vegetables they will lack variety if the vegetables are always cooked in the same manner.

Many vegetables fall into one class merely because they have the same flavor. Cabbage, brussels sprouts, cauliflower and broccoli, for example, are different in appearance but all have a cabbage flavor. Your selection of these four vegetables to be served on consecutive days may or may not be a success, depending upon the manner in which they are cooked. Simply boiling in water and serving with seasoning and butter is not enough. It is the addition of an appropriate sauce for one, escalloping for another, etc., that will provide the difference of taste that will give true variety to your menus.

Strong flavored vegetabes—onions, turnips, cabbage and cauliflower—are objectionable to many because of their pronounced flavor. The flavor will be more pleasing if the vegetables are cooked first in a large quantity of boiling water in an uncovered vessel and then served with a white sauce or in a scalloped or au gratin dish.

Sauce Adds Variety.

A smooth medium white or cheese sauce will add variety to many vegetables and will make them more nourishing. A thick sauce, pasty with flour, often makes creamed vegetables an unpopular dish.

Both eggplant and summer squash are lacking in character unless properly cooked. Plain boiled squash is often too watery to be palatable, but if baked or boiled until tender, mashed, and served with a generous amount of butter, a little cream, and seasoned to taste with salt and pepper it takes on a different aspect. Eggplant is usually fried, but it can be scalloped or stuffed and baked.

There are numerous ways of preparing potatoes, both sweet and white, to make them acceptable every day in the week.

Meat Flavors Vegetables.

A bit of salt pork or bacon rind gives a pleasing flavor to beans, blackeyed peas and dried legumes. The meat is cut into cubes and added to the vegetables during the cooking in unsalted water.

Many vegetables can be served raw in salad combinations. Carrot sticks are attractive in place of celery. Chopped, fresh, tender, young spinach combined with shredded lettuce, carrots, grated onions and chopped celery makes an interesting luncheon salad.

Celery, which is usually served raw or as a flavoring for soups, is delicious when cooked and served with a white sauce alone or in combination with peas and carrots. It also can be braised and served with a brown gravy.

The picture illustrates a new method for the preparation of cabbage. Instead of boiling the cabbage as usual it is cooked with milk in a casserole in the oven. The recipe follows.

Baked Buttered Cabbage.

3 cups shredded cabbage
1 cup milk
3 tablespoons butter

Shred cabbage; place in a covered heat resistant casserole. Pour boiling water over the cabbage and let it stand while other food to be baked is prepared, or for 15 or 30 minutes. Then pour off water. Add milk and butter. Cover and bake. Season before serving. Bake for one hour in a moderate oven (350° F.).

Dorothea Duncan has prepared a bulletin of unusual recipes for the preparation of vegetables. Information will be found elsewhere on the food page.

Uses of Pepper Are Described

Cayenne, Hottest Member of Family, Should Be Served With Care.

There is a lot to learn about pepper. The peppercorn is the whole berry of the pepper plant and is used to flavor soups and stews.

Paprika is a Hungarian red pepper of bright red color, and is used in powdered form in all meat and vegetable salads and in soups, both cream and stock. It has a mild sweet flavor and may be used also as a garnish for potatoes, cream cheese, salads or eggs.

Black pepper can be used as a seasoning for all meat and vegetable dishes where the color does not affect the appearance of the product.

Cayenne pepper, usually obtained from small fruited varieties of capsicum, should be of dark red color. It is the hottest of the pepper family and should be used in small amounts to season certain vegetables and may be used in some salad dressings and in cheese dishes. Always use cayenne with care.

White pepper is practically the same as black pepper but the outer shell which gives the black color has been removed. Use white pepper where black pepper is used when the appearance of the dish must be considered.

Oil Cloth With Backing Of Felt Is Innovation

Once-lowly oilcloth has attained real distinction, thanks to the ingenuity of manufacturers, and among the latest innovations is an oilcloth with felt backing. The advantages are obvious. Hot dishes placed on it do not mar the table, and they can be set down as noiselessly as if a cloth and padding were the covering.

Color runs riot, from pastel shades to bright and varied hues. Smart geometric designs are available, if you prefer them to plain colors and floral borders. And no longer is the surface objectionably shiny, for many oilcloths come in a dull finish that successfully disguises the true nature of the material.

Doilies or mats cut from oilcloth, with edges pinked, dress the informal luncheon table attractively and are a boon when there are small children in the family.

Hamburger Used To Stuff Tomatoes

Tomatoes stuffed with hamburger flavored with grated onion and cheese make a delicious luncheon or dinner dish. Try this Post prize-winning recipe submitted by Miss Kaye Burwell, 3909 Ingomar street northwest.

Stuffed Tomatoes.

½ pound ground hamburger
6 large, ripe tomatoes
2 slices wheat bread, crumbled
¼ onion grated
6 tablespoons grated cheese
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
⅛ teaspoon pepper

Cut tops off of tomatoes, hollow out and set aside, bottom side up, to drain. Chop tomato pulp, put in bowl, and mix with ground hamburger, grated onion, crumbled bread, Worcestershire sauce, salt and pepper. Fill tomatoes with this mixture, sprinkle grated cheese on top of each one, and put in greased pan. Cover bottom of pan with water and place it in oven. Cook in moderate oven 30 to 40 minutes.

Serve Cabbage Baked With Milk and Butter

The next time you have an oven dinner, choose cabbage as the vegetable and bake it with milk and butter in a covered heat resistant casserole.

Choice of Cut Is Big Factor In Beef Stew

Gravy Can Be Made Richer by Adding One or Two Bouillon Cubes.

A good beef stew should be a masterpiece of blended flavors, rich brown cubes of meat, gravy of just the right consistency and color, and vegetables which are firm and even in size or dumplings which are the perfection of fluffiness.

First in importance is a well chosen meat cut. Flank, neck or chuck are all good choices because they are meaty and well flavored and will cut into even pieces. They are economy cuts as well. Be sure that the meat is cut in even one and one-half or two inch cubes for individual servings.

That rich brown color can be obtained by first rolling the meat in flour and then browning thoroughly in some meat drippings or fresh lard. This initial step guarantees the rich flavor and the perfect color so important to a good stew.

Next simmer the meat slowly and gently in hot water until the meat is tender. If vegetables are to be added, place them in the stew kettle before the meat is done.

A clove or two, one bay leaf, a teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce, a very little onion, a tablespoon of catsup, all vary and enhance the flavor of a beef stew. Add the seasoning during the simmering of the meat.

The gravy, if not rich enough, may be colored and flavored with the addition of one or two beef bouillon cubes. If the gravy is too thin, thicken it by adding flour, using two tablespoons of flour rubbed to a thin past with one-half cup of cold water.

Household Hints

When cereals become monotonous, try popcorn for breakfast. Children will love it. Serve in a bowl of milk, with sugar; or else serve it simply hot with butter and salt. Toasted, puffed cereals, served with melted butter and salt, also lend variety to breakfast.

Colorful fruit and vegetables, attractively arranged in a bowl, can be used as dining room table decorations in place of flowers.

The mystery of a jam-filled muffin will delight the children. Put half the batter in the tin, drop in a spoonful of jam and add the rest of the batter.

Recrisping Crackers.

Dry cereals and crackers that have lost their crispness can be freshened by placing in a flat pan in a hot oven (400 degrees F.). The cereal should be placed in a thin layer rather than in a mound and should be tossed lightly with a fork several times during the freshening. Wheat biscuits that have lost their freshness can be topped with butter and toasted under the broiler. Watch them carefully so they do not burn.

Cheese Dishes Are Appetizing

Add Distinction to Economy Meals, Especially When Meat Is Omitted.

Cheese will add distinction to economy meals especially those from which meat has been omitted. A cheese fondue, a rarebit or a cheese sandwich make a satisfying main course. A fluffy baked potato topped with melted cheese will make a vegetable platter doubly attractive. Cheese and crackers for dessert will assure a scrimpy menu a full quota of protein and important minerals the family needs for health.

American and cheddar, the milder types of cream cheese, are the most adaptable as cooking ingredients. They will melt at a low temperature without becoming tough and stringy. Among the famous dessert cheeses are Edam, Camembert, Roquefort, Liederkranz and Gruyere. Some of the imported dessert cheeses are expensive, but the domestic varieties are not costly and they are often as good as the imported.

Roquefort is especially popular as a salad ingredient. Crumble it into the desired quantity of French dressing and serve with hearts of lettuce, romaine or similar greens. Roquefort, mixed in equal parts with soft cream cheese, makes a delicious stuffing for celery.

Clever Woman Does Not Slave Over Ritual of Sunday Dinner

Mother May Have Day of Relaxation by Letting Children Help.

Sunday is what mother makes it. When she spends the day slaving in the kitchen, emerges all fagged out and sets on the table a meal so heavy that it leaves the children groggy and father stretched out prone on the living room sofa for hours afterward, Sunday can scarcely be a source of joy or relaxation.

The woman who makes the Sabbath a day of ease sets the pace for the rest of the family, permitting time for worship, rest and recreation, or the companionship which is curtailed of necessity during the week when everyone is separated by work-a-day occupations.

This does not mean that meals should be neglected. On the other hand, it requires more careful planning to enjoy a day of leisure. But it can be done, and it is worth the effort.

Everything Ready.

Cold roast beef, creamed potatoes, a simple salad and a cake make a delicious Sunday dinner, and the major part of the work can be done the day before. Some warm Sundays still are promised, and if the roast is cooked on Saturday, the house will be free from oven heat when the family is all at home. The potatoes can be boiled and diced, ready to be heated in cream sauce. The cake can be made in advance, of course, particularly if it is chosen for its keeping qualities. A chocolate cake retains its moisture well and a boiled frosting keeps, provided that it is properly made. The frosting that evaporates or granulates overnight lacks some essential in the making.

Serving Sunday dinner on Saturday night may sound a bit revolutionary, but it has its advantages. If the roast is large, there will be ample to serve, sliced and cold, on Sunday, perhaps eked out with other cold cuts. If there is cake for dessert Saturday night, and you do not want to serve it again at noon on Sunday, make a cold pudding for that meal, and serve the remaining cake for supper Sunday evening.

Creamed and casserole dishes can be prepared the day before they are to be used, even if they are not actually cooked. The vegetables or meats that are to go into them can be made ready and kept in the refrigerator overnight; only a few minutes will be required to make the cream sauce and toast, or to bake the casserole dish in the oven.

The city family can sojourn in the country, for a Sunday dinner of steak broiled over a campfire; or the suburban family, which has a fancy for doing something different can erect a convenient oven of bricks to cook the steak out of doors, eliminating dishwashing entirely.

After a substantial Sunday dinner and a leisurely afternoon, the average person is not ready for another heavy meal in the evening. There is no reason why mother should not step out of the kitchen entirely and take a well-earned rest, for supper is such a simple meal that the children can prepare and serve it. They may not be adept at first, but it is a good plan to give them encouragement, and a trial. They can make sandwiches and cocoa; later they can learn to combine the leftovers in the refrigerator in an appetizing salad. And they will enjoy the experience.

So long as a woman makes heavy labor of housekeeping, and undertakes to do all the work herself, the family lets her do it. By careful planning, and by teaching children to share the responsibility, she can create the leisure which gives her the chance to live enjoyably, and grow old serenely, instead of being harassed by a constant minutia of details. Overworking is a tragedy when it is unavoidable; when it poses as virtue, it is folly.

See Tuesday's Post For Contest Notice

Recipes are being tested now, and tested, too. They are uniformly good, and a decision will be hard to reach, but Dorothea Duncan, food editor of The Post, is in the last stage of the work, and the prizes will go to the three recipes which are judged the most delicious and practical.

A Sunshine Mixmaster will go to the first-place winner, a G. E. Hotpoint coffee maker is second prize and third is a Dominion sandwich grill. The prizes are being awarded by The Post and the National Electrical Supply Co., which co-operated in conducting the contest.

Selecting Mushrooms.

Fresh mushrooms must be selected with care. They should be white or creamy in color, firm to the touch, and moist, not dry or rubbery. The veil on the underside which connects stem and cap should not be broken. Speckled mushrooms should be avoided. One pound of medium-sized mushrooms will yield four generous servings of broiled mushrooms or five to six servings of creamed mushrooms.

Prize-Winning Recipes Based On Hamburger

Timbals and Cannelon of Beef Are Suggested Dinner Dishes.

Even the humble hamburger can be dressed in style suitable for the company dinner. Mrs. Romaine Crawford, 3008 Thirteenth street northwest, suggests hamburg timbals, and Mrs. Stanley Claibaugh, 1630 Fuller street northwest, roast cannelon of beef. Both recipes were awarded a prize in The Post's recipe contest for hamburger dishes last week.

Hamburger Timbals.

1 cup hamburger
1 cup milk
1 cup pimiento cut in pieces
1 teaspoon salt
Few drops onion juice
4 eggs
Pepper and paprika

Beat eggs lightly, add milk and seasoning. Add hamburger, pimiento and onion juice. Turn in buttered timbal molds. Bake or steam until firm in pan of hot water. Place greased paper over top while steaming. Serve with following sauce:

Bechamel Sauce.

3 tablespoons butter
⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons flour
1 cup stock
¼ teaspoon paprika
½ cup cream

Melt butter, add flour and cook well. Add stock, being careful to keep mixture smooth. Add seasoning—then add cream. Continue cooking for few minutes until all ingredients are well blended. Remove from fire. Serve on hamburger timbals while hot.

Roast Cannelon of Beef.

1¼ pounds hamburger
Grated rind of 1 lemon
1 tablespoon minced parsley
1½ teaspoons salt
1 tablespoon salt
1 tablespoon grated onion
1 tablespoon lemon juice
¼ teaspoon ground mace
2 teaspoons melted butter
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon paprika
Few grains cayenne pepper
6 strips bacon
4 large bananas

Mix together thoroughly the hamburger, grated lemon rind, salt, grated onion, mace, butter, pepper, paprika and a cautious sprinkling of cayenne pepper. Press into a roll; place in a greased pan and bake at 450 degrees F. for 20 minutes. Then place the bacon strips across the roll and arrange in the pan about it the bananas halved lengthwise. Sprinkle them with a little lemon juice and bake a delicate brown, about 15 minutes longer. Serve the roast hot with the bananas arranged about it.

Sandwich Fillings For School Lunches

Kept on Hand, They Save Time for Housewife.

Sandwich fillings that can be prepared in quantity and kept on hand for use during the winter for school lunches are a boon to the busy housewife. Mrs. John Wilkinson, Esmont, Va., a Post Food Page enthusiast, generously offers to share her favorite recipe for sandwich with other readers.

Sandwich Filling.

18 sweet peppers, some green and some red
6 green tomatoes
4 large onions
½ gallon cucumber pickle
3 tablespoons white mustard seed
4 tablespoons flour
1½ cups vinegar
1½ pounds brown sugar
1 pint mayonnaise.

Grind each (tomatoes, peppers, onions and cucumbers) separately, and drain out all water. Soak tomatoes (after grinding) in salt three hours with one pint of water. Drain. Stir flour smooth with a small amount of the vinegar, add mustard seed and brown sugar and ground vegetables with flour to vinegar. Cook all together until thick, then add mayonnaise. Seal in clean, hot jars.

Picnic Sandwich.

Frankfurters and sauerkraut make an excellent sandwich combination for the autumn supper out of doors. Use one pint of sauerkraut for each six frankfurters and prepare as follows: Butter six large soft rolls which have been split, line with sauerkraut and place frankfurter in each roll. Toast rolls over open fire.

Raisin Cake Suggestion.

Flour currants or raisins thoroughly and they will not drop to the bottom of the cake.

"The Clairvoyant" Opens Tomorrow at the Belasco, With Bargain Bill Tonight

American Stars Appear in Late London Release

Ousts Gallic 'Red Head;' Wrestlers at Central; Amusement Notes.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

With the RKO-Keith Theater, the habitual switcher of opening days for new film bills, continuing Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers in "Top Hat" through a fifth week, beginning today, the function of changing opening dates at the last minute seems to have devolved upon the Belasco.

Quick to pick up the delegated duty, the Belasco announces that "The Clairvoyant," costarring Claude Rains and Fay Wray, will inaugurate its regular engagement on Lafayette Square tomorrow, instead of Tuesday as was expected.

This means that the special late preview that was adopted last week as a regular practice by the Belasco management will be presented tonight. It will be recalled that this innovation is in the nature of a two-for-one bargain. Those who purchase tickets for the final showing of "The Red Head," beginning at 9 o'clock tonight, will be privileged to remain for a gratuitous screening of "The Clairvoyant," scheduled to begin at 10:34 by the clock. "Gratuitous" is precisely the word. No additional charge is levied for the additional feature picture.

It is lamentable, but not surprising, that so excellent a picture as "Red Head" should suffer the stigma of a curtailed engagement. It is a naturalistic study of boyhood that is executed with fine skill by everyone involved in the production from director down to the smallest "bit" player. But it is not altogether a pleasant or a happy picture and the inadequate English titles superimposed upon the bottom of the print fall far short of conveying any comprehensive notion of the subtleties of characterization that the voluble French dialogue makes plain. To be blunt about it, "Red Head" is not "box office" for American audiences.

If "The Clairvoyant" maintains the standard of excellence of many of the Gaumont British releases that have preceded it to local screens, it probably will exercise a much stronger pull at the ticket wicket—especially with two such well-known American screen personalities as Mr. Rains and Miss Wray in the pivotal roles.

What are said to be the most realistic and exciting pictures ever made of a wrestling match—rassiin' to youse guys—will be presented beginning tomorrow at the Warner Brothers Central Theater, on Ninth street, between D and E. The pictures show in startlingly candid close-ups, the match between the world's heavyweight champion, Danno O'Mahoney, and Don George, leading contender for the title. Jimmy Braddock, world's champion heavyweight boxer, appears as referee of the match, which was held recently in Boston. One of the most exciting incidents of the evening came after the main bout had been completed when fans and handlers started a young riot in which Mr. Braddock was forced to sock an over-enthusiastic second on the chin to calm his ardor. The wrestling film will be shown through next Wednesday.

But the law will not permit fight pictures to be shown in the District! Heh, heh, heh! Or don't you enjoy travesties?

Perhaps it is the week's boxfighting that has brought it to mind, but a shot in the current newsreels which, at this late day, never fails to bring a lump to the throat is the "clip" of the few remaining veterans of the War Between the States marching totteringly, but proudly, in the parade celebrating the recent annual encampment of the G. A. R. Here are heroes whose fights invite no censorships and no bans. Every year the thinning lines grow less; every year they move at a slower pace. There is something to think about in this annual spectacle of the newsreels and a little thinking about it at this point will do you no harm, the state of the Nation being what it is.

Dance Course Added.

President Stephen E. Cochran announces the addition of a department of the dance to the course of study afforded by the Clifford Brooke Academy of Stage Training in the Dramatic Arts. Operation of the new department will be inaugurated with the opening of the fall term of the academy on October 7. It will be under the direction of Miss Marian Venable, well known in Washington.

Classes in all forms of stage dancing will be formed for pupils of all ages, ranging from tiny tots to adults seeking proficiency either as amateurs or professionals. Ballet, tap, acrobatic, Spanish and modern dancing will be included in the courses to be offered and classes will be conducted morning, afternoon and night for the convenience of students.

Artists of Experience.

Miss Venable is equipped for her post by several seasons as a dancer in the Chicago Civic Opera ballet and the conduct of her own schools of the dance, both in Chicago and New York. She has studied under such masters as Adolph Bolm, V. Swoboda, Louis Chalif, Kobeleff, Alex Yakovloff and Luigi Albertieri. In the field of Oriental, Spanish and modern German, Miss Venable has studied under Angel Cansino, Besucaire Montalvo, Jose Alvarez and Alberto de Lima.

Additional floor space for the studio of the dance has been acquired adjoining the studio of the drama school at 1000 Connecticut avenue, at the corner of K street. The school of dance will be conducted on the same high plane as the dramatic school that has been so successful and the same cooperation will be extended with a view to launching students on professional careers as has been exercised in the field of the drama.

Hardie Meakin, manager of RKO-Keith's, and Dr. Frank T. Shyne, the neck-cracking, spine-twisting, sinus-blasting actor's friend, whose gentle ministrations more than once have enabled "the show to go on," will officiate as Kings for the Day, when members of the local Variety Club assemble at the Willard for the second luncheon of the season on Monday at 1. Lou Holtz and Belle Baker, stanch old wheel-horses of vaudeville, already celebrated in these columns, are expected to head the program of entertainment that is planned. Pursuant to the custom launched at the first luncheons of the season, Kings Meakin and Shyne confide that several speakers and many guests of national prominence will be in attendance. In compliment to Mr. Meakin's glistening pate, I move that Miss Baker sing "Shyne on Hardie's Moon!"

Announce First Play.

As the first of three full-length plays to be presented by the group during the coming season in the school auditorium, Twenty-fourth and K streets northwest, "It Happened in Hollywood" will be staged by the St. Stephens Players on Monday and Tuesday, November 4 and 5.

The cast of this initial production of the year will include William C. McCarthy, Chris Thayer, Charles W. Knee, Mary Reppetti, Barbara Henry, Sally Major, Claude Haren, J. J. Henry, Francis J. Gunning, Frank Slattery, Mabel McCarthy and Bernie Haren.

Officers of the St. Stephen Players elected for the ensuing year are William C. McCarthy, president; Charles W. Knee, secretary; Dr. J. Leonard Conley, business manager; F. J. Gunning, director of publicity, and the Rev. Henry Sank, director.

On The Air Today

Football comes in for an early bid for the listener's attention this afternoon, before baseball has an opportunity to do its world series fadeout, when N. B. C. and Columbia plant microphones in the press stands at South Bend and Baltimore.

Both WRC and WJSV will provide an account of the Notre Dame-Kansas game at Baltimore Stadium. WMAL starts its fall season with the Navy-William and Mary game from the Baltimore Stadium.

Ford Bond and Bob Brown will man the mikes at South Bend for WRC; Ted Husing and Les Quailey, for WJSV. The WMAL game will be handled by Bill Slater.

WMAL, in addition, gives 15 minutes over to the Ryder Cup matches at 5:45 p. m., direct from Ridgewood, N. J.

Fred Astaire will play the accordion tonight in the "Hit Parade," WRC at 7. Somehow, with movie actresses singing instead of emoting, and comedians tap-dancing instead of being funny, and so on, I hate to see Astaire go into his accordion act. Be that as it may, he'll play "Sweet Music" from his old show "Band Wagon." Early reports indicate that "Check to Check" leads the field in the most popular songs of the last week. Lennie Hayton and the orchestra will play it.

Al Jolson makes his farewell in the "Chateau" tonight, WRC, at 8:30. Next week the show will be presented from New York. Ginger Rogers is Jolson's guest star for his finale. . . . Phil Ross, a young comedian who won his spurs in Cleveland, appears as host at "Club Columbia," WJSV, at 7 p. m. The lauding of a comic fails to live up to expectations—but G.B.S. reports Ross was so good they engaged him for tonight after a scant four minutes of auditioning.

E. C. Helm, president of the Washington spelling society, and Willard B. Smith, whom Helm believes to be the best speller in the country, were present last night at WMAL, at 9, when announcement was made of the all-Washington championship spelldown, set for next Thursday night, at WMAL. About thirty contestants have enrolled for the spelling battle thus far. If you wish to enter, please get your application in before Wednesday evening. Address Radio Editor, The Post, or Station WMAL.

Mr. Wilkins ought to name his products "Fifty-five." All his news broadcasts, which begin next Monday at WJSV, 5 minutes each, begin at 55 minutes after the hour. They'll be presented daily at 9:55, 1:55, 3:55 and 5:55.

Which reminds me of the letter from F. W. Price, of the Government Printing Office, who observes that Miss Kaplan (who spelled a week ago in The Post-WMAL bee) misspelled "disestablishmentarianism." Mr. Price points out she spelled it "disestablishmentarionism." Now, surely, Mr. Price, we shouldn't quibble with a little girl over one small "a" or "o," should we?

Hecht month will be celebrated tonight at 8, WJSV, when H. H. Levi, president of the company, makes a brief air talk; General Manager C. B. Dalkin introduces Commissioner Hazen, and a musical program is presented by Marjorie King and Judy Ellington, supported by Sidney's Music.

• • • • •

A complete account of the fall and winter premieres taking the air tomorrow will be found in three big radio pages in The Sunday Post. The details of the new shows bringing many of radio's star attractions back to the airways will be doubly interesting, inasmuch as daylight time ends this week-end and many favorite programs will be on your dials at new hours beginning Sunday.

Court Bailiff's Brother, One of Triplets, Dies

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 27.—As James H. Kiracofe, a bailiff in the Circuit Court here, was celebrating his seventy-eighth birthday yesterday, he received word of the death of his triplet brother, the Rev. Joseph H. Kiracofe, at Elkhart, Ind.

The Kiracofe triplets were born in Stribling Springs, Augusta County, Va., 1857. One of the triplets died in infancy. Joseph Kiracofe was one of six brothers who were preachers, and served for 56 years in the United Brethren Church before his retirement several years ago. He is survived by his wife, five sons and a daughter, all residing at Elkhart.

2 Sentenced to 5 Years On Robbery Charges

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Luray, Va., Sept. 27.—After a session of one day the Page County court recessed yesterday until next week, when it will take up many criminal and civil cases.

The one-day term resulted in the conviction of Sam Cave and Luther Caraway on robbery charges. Each was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary.

Arthur Pikkett was given a two-year term suspended sentence in the penitentiary for escaping from a road convict camp. Pikkett's sentence was suspended after physicians testified that confinement in the penitentiary would result in his death.

Culbertson on Bridge

When to Hold Up.

You have doubtless heard of the holdup play. It now is one of the standard tools of every good bridge player. This fact is in itself a tribute to the great advancement made in bridge learning in the last few years. Not ten years ago, the late Milton C. Work, from whom I have learned so much, in his books and in his lectures, amazed the average player by demonstrating cases in which the then unheard-of holdup play would save a game.

Most holdup plays are designed for the simple purpose taugh by Mr. Work, and they are particularly effective at no trump. How well he taught it is evidenced by the manner in which people immediately came to understand it and to use it, in such situations as this:

NORTH

WEST
♠ K-Q-J-3-2

EAST
♠ 10-9-4

SOUTH
♠ A-8-6

West leads the king of spades. There are no trumps, and South is declarer. If South takes the ace at once, whenever East is in the lead, he will play spades and West will win four tricks. South, therefore, lets West win the first two tricks, taking his ace on the third round, and obviously East, if he gets the lead, can not play spades. Frequently West has no other entry and the spade suit is bottled up.

A holdup play is an attempt to cut off the communications between the enemy's hands by exhausting the suit.

The holdup play is simple in this case, but I am sure that even Mr. Work would have been surprised if he could have seen some of the brilliant uses to which it can be put by a clever player.

Profit by Loss.

By holding up an ace in a manner that appeared insane, a resourceful declarer paralyzed the enemy's lines of communications as well as their brain centers.

The bidding (both sides vulnerable; part score of 40):

WEST	NORTH	EAST	SOUTH
1Sp.	Pass	2Sp.	3Ht.

West opened the king of spades; South let him hold it, and also the queen of spades. West was completely fooled, thinking East had the ace of spades and South the king of diamonds. West played the ace and a small heart, stripping dummy's trumps. South overtook and drew the last trump, then led a club. West played the ace and led the ten of spades, thinking East would overtake with the ace and lead a diamond through the king. South took the ace of spades, overtook the queen of clubs and discarded his diamonds. He made three-odd.

Today's Question.

Question—Is it better to open from Q-x-x-x or from K-x-x-x?

Answer—Unless the bidding has given some indication of which suit is better to open, the lead from the king has a slight advantage.

At the theater, the other night, when the curtain rolled up, there was a loud outburst of applause from the audience . . . I thought at first that there must be an actor hidden somewhere on the stage, but this was not so . . . The audience was applauding a very ordinary stage set that revealed one busted sofa, one chromo, one standing lamp, and several pieces of furniture of dubious vintage . . . Now, far be it from me to raise my voice to belittle the scenic designers who eke out a precarious existence fashioning sets for the Broadway legitimate theater . . . Some of them are masters at their work, and others have enriched Cain's warehouses . . . But there should be discrimination on the part of the audience . . . If the set revealed on the stage is catch-as-catch-can in architecture and design, let the audience remain mute, let them not be stampeded by friends of the scenic designer, who have been scattered strategically about the building . . . I will brook this no longer.

Each of us, I guess, becomes introspective and retrospective on the occasion of his birthday . . . So you'll pardon me for yielding to the natural temptation because today marks No. 34 . . . When I was a kid, it seemed that anybody who arrived at such an age must be a venerable old person, but curiously enough, I feel quite spry and lively . . . True enough, I may be a bit touched in the wind, as they say at the race track, but this only proves that you can't have your cigarettes and eat 'em, too . . . The journey so far has been exciting and satisfactory . . . I've met a lot of swell men and swell girls en route, and most of the friends who started out with me are still in my corner . . . Lady Luck has been generous, God's in his heaven, and all's well with the world.

On this occasion, it would give me no end of fierce pleasure to deliver some stirring message to the world . . . It would wind up this column in a blaze of editorial glory if these typewrtier keys could assemble themselves to spell out a new philosophy of living . . . It would excite comment if from the experiences of 34 years I could draw a conclusion on Success that would be a convenient recipe for success . . . Perhaps I should be armed, at the moment, with a club with which to belabor the venial sins of Broadway . . . I have a conviction that could any of these things be done, the managing editor would call me into his plush sanctum and congratulate me, pat me on the head . . . Awe-struck reporters would point me out in the city rooms as the writer With a Message . . . But I ain't got no message . . . The height of my inventiveness is to borrow a line from Ted Lewis and ask: "Is everybody happy?" . . . Huh? . . . And now I have to run home and bake a cake.

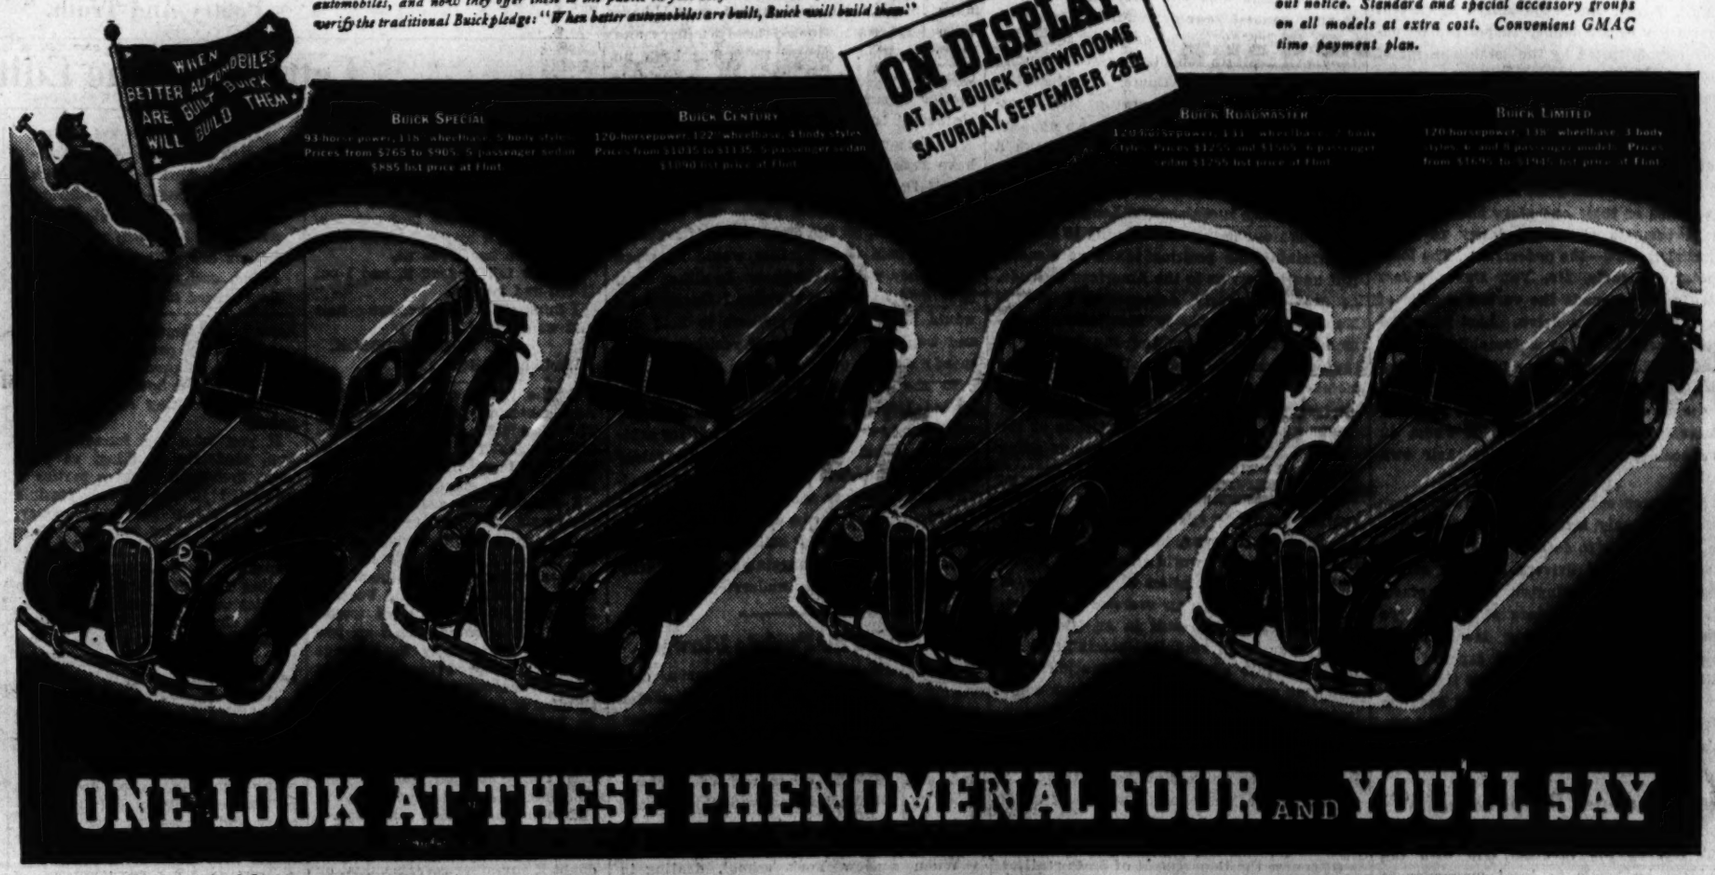
NAILING OUR FLAG TO THE MASTHEAD

—In the largest single self-contained motor car factory in the world, thousands of veteran Buick workmen have focused for two years on perfecting four new series of phenomenal automobiles, and now they offer these to the public in full confidence that they dramatically verify the traditional Buick pledge: "When better automobiles are built, Buick will build them."

All prices quoted in this advertisement are list prices at Flint, Michigan, subject to change without notice. Standard and special accessory groups on all models at extra cost. Convenient GMAC time payment plan.



ONE LOOK AT THESE PHENOMENAL FOUR AND YOU'LL SAY

"BUICK'S THE BUY!"

Two years ago Buick deliberately leveled its sights on 1936.

It coolly set its aim on bringing to market for that year a line of motor cars that would startle the world.

It purposed to do that, not by freak or superficial design, not by skimping quality to make a price, but by sheer merit as expressed in automobile beauty, value, ability.

It submits to you now the eminently satisfying results of that fruitful two years of concentrated endeavor.

Here are four separate series of sensational new Buick cars — cars called phenomenal by experts in the trade who previewed them.

Each is a feast to the eye schooled in mature modern styling, as you can see.

Each has under the smooth flowing planes and surfaces of its smart exterior, the solid, tough, durable, beautifully engineered chassis that underwrites Buick dependability.

And each offers you from the stepped-up power of its big thrifty valve-in-head eight-cylinder engine such safe, thrilling performance as you have never known.

These cars are big cars every one—built to almost lavish dimensions of body room and head clearance—yet they handle with the fingertip lightness of small cars.

They are literally breath-taking in power and speed and take-off, yet under their new tiptoe hydraulics and easy-steering knee-action they are almost as manageable as a telephone.

They are thewed and sinewed by that quality which springs from Buick's third of a century of manufacturing experience, advantaged by $14,500,000 worth of new tools, dies and factory re-equipment devised for these cars alone.

Two Traffic Proposals.

Plans for attacks on two angles of Washington's accident and traffic fatality problem have been announced. Neither promises a complete solution, but each is designed to tie down at least certain sections of the Frankenstein monster which modern technology and human wilfulness have set loose.

The one is directed against faulty mechanical equipment in automobiles. Support is being recruited for a campaign to make compulsory periodic inspection of all District motor vehicles. Such inspection is already required in many States with results that justify its continuance. Against the plan are those who fear the practice would lead to racketeering on the part of those authorized to conduct inspections. This danger, if real, can be minimized by careful supervision of all deputy inspectors or entirely circumvented by the establishment of public inspection stations. In any case, nothing should be allowed to remain in the way of a move to rid the highways of vehicles with inadequate brakes, blinding lights or other faulty mechanisms.

The second attack aims not at the control of vehicles or their operators but rather at the movements of the majority of their potential victims—the pedestrians. The local director of traffic, Mr. Van Duzer, offers statistics to persuade the veriest skeptic of the worth of such a drive. Last year 135 persons were killed by automobiles in the District. Eighty-nine were pedestrians and investigation indicated that 66 of these were themselves at fault. To date this year, 50 pedestrians have been killed, of whom 40 have been held responsible for their own deaths.

The figures speak for themselves. Jaywalkers not only invite their own destruction but do much to detract from the efforts of authorities and drivers who are struggling to make Washington a safer place. This is an intolerable state of affairs. To change it would probably mean inconvenience to many and added expense (for additional policing) for all. But if stricter regulation and even punishment of heedless pedestrians will serve to improve Washington's record, it will be worth the cost.

"Tremendous Responsibility."

Before Administrator Hopkins of the WPA left on his vacation trip with the President he wrote to local managers of the work-relief program: "The obligation and responsibility placed upon you is tremendous." In view of the fact that the WPA is pledged to create jobs at the rate of about 40,000 per day during its chief's absence, it would seem that even these emphatic words are understated.

Without doubt Mr. Hopkins and Secretary Ickes, as well as the President, are in need of relaxation after their strenuous attempts to bring order out of the chaos surrounding the Government's employment program. Unfortunately, however, this need does not change the anomalous situation resulting from the simultaneous departure of the three principals in the spending drama, just as it reaches a crucial point. It is startling that such a stupendous undertaking should thus be left to the discretion of subordinates who have been given only the flimsy shadow of a policy to follow.

Mr. Hopkins' final instructions to his aids are revealing. "Within the limits of human ability," he wrote, "you must provide employment for all eligible workers." Everything else is subordinate to that charge. To give local directors a maximum of latitude in carrying out this mandate the WPA has attempted to approve "twice as many projects as can be financed out of available funds." In other words, approval of a project at Washington does not mean that it will be undertaken. Local administrators are instructed to choose from a large list of approved undertakings—33,300 have already been stamped with the President's O. K.—only such projects as will afford suitable employment for that particular community's jobless.

Whether the directors of this camouflaged dole system are in Washington or cruising on the Pacific, therefore, the actual spending of the greater part of the $4,000,000,000 work-relief fund will be left to local functionaries. Within broad limits of policy, and narrow limits of time, they must get the money spent as best they can. What results may be achieved is an entirely secondary question. Indeed, the WPA has made it virtually impossible for the local agencies to accomplish anything substantial. The two-and-a-half-hour day, the low maximum expenditure per man and the rigid time limits rule out virtually everything except boondoggling.

In these circumstances, one may easily understand why such conscientious administrators as Capt. Howard F. Clark, Assistant Engineer Commissioner of the District, are washing their hands of the WPA mess.

A Decisive Factor.

An immediate result of the invocation of Article 15 of the League Covenant has been a perceptible sobering of the Italian attitude.

The scheduled nation-wide assemblage of the entire populace, to listen to a broadcast on the situation by Mussolini, has been postponed—obviously because the dictator for once does not know just what to say to his subjects.

Similarly it is officially reported that Italy will take no aggressive action for the next couple of weeks, while the League Council is preparing its report on the dispute "and the recommendations which are deemed just and proper in regard thereto." This postponement may merely mean that the Ethiopian terrain is still too rain-soaked to permit military operations. But the form in which the announcement comes indicates that the growing threat of sanctions is having a very stimulating effect on Mussolini's reflective powers.

At this critical juncture it is imperative to realize that developments at Geneva are not merely a dramatic show staged for the interest of Americans as irresponsible spectators. Regardless of non-membership in the League, regardless of our seemingly disinterested position, regardless of the sloppy neutrality legislation now on the statute books, the United States is inevitably a major actor in this drama.

In fact, whether we realize it or not, we are at this stage of the proceedings probably the most influential participant therein. If Great Britain and France feel that there is any chance of our demanding freedom to trade with Italy in the event of sanctions, they will hesitate long before really applying this pressure to Rome. If Mussolini feels that there is any chance of our opposing a blockade of Italy now, as we opposed that of Germany in 1915, he will take a chance and launch his legions into Ethiopia.

It is almost habitual in this country to talk of League successes and League failures as though our policy had nothing to do with determining the position taken at Geneva. But uncertainty as to the American attitude, as was so clearly demonstrated in the Manchurian dispute, is inevitably a tremendous factor in making the League of Nations irresolute and pusillanimous. Its members simply cannot afford to undertake far-reaching commitments if they have no means of knowing what the attitude of the United States toward their course is going to be.

At the present moment resolute pressure against arbitrary aggression will probably not merely avert war, but promises also to stabilize the whole world structure in a way essential to consolidation of the forces of recovery. A failure to exercise that pressure will certainly result in an Italo-Ethiopian war with infinite possibilities of spreading into a world conflagration from which no amount of wishful thinking could isolate us. And a do-nothing, say-nothing, head-in-sand attitude on our part will unquestionably make it far more difficult for the League to be resolute, and, therefore, far easier for Mussolini to upset the apple cart.

Of course the Department of State realizes that the question of peace or war will now in large part be determined by the American attitude, whether it be passive or active. Of course history will assess our official policy during the immediate future as one of the decisive elements in this critical period of civilization.

But there is no certainty that President Roosevelt, now off on a political and recreational swing, realizes the overshadowing importance of the next few weeks. There is no assurance that he realizes the extent to which the sheer power of the United States makes us the arbiter of world destiny, whether we are merely passive, or whether we take a positive stand in behalf of the principles to which we have so often sworn allegiance.

The path of American statesmanship now is not to pretend that we can be isolated if war breaks out. It is clearly to support the forces which are working to avert war. Such a policy, moreover, involves no risk whatsoever for the United States. The only risk lies in giving tacit approval to a philosophy of aggression which, if unchecked now, will not always be a matter of even pretended indifference to us.

Some Advance.

Although planes normally fly well over the high-tension wires marking the Virginia border of the Washington Airport, it will be welcome news to passengers and pilots alike that steps will soon be taken to dismantle the poles and bury the wires. Power lines have figured in air disasters so frequently as to make intolerable their further presence near an approach to the National Capital's landing field.

Discussion of the hazard has been heard intermittently for several years, dating back to the time when the Public Utilities Commission ordered similar lines removed from that section of the airport lying indisputably within the District boundaries. At that time question arose as to the Commission's jurisdiction over the Virginia portion of the field. The matter was referred to the Boundary Commission and decision is still pending.

However, without taking further chances, the power company owning the lines now announces its plan to remove the wires. Doubtless they will soon come down, providing thereby a welcome contrast with the dilatory tactics generally characterizing all efforts to improve the safety of the Washington Airport.

Just What Is Splendid?

Informed that the brief coal strike had been terminated by an agreement between representatives of the United Mine Workers and the operatives, President Roosevelt expressed delight at this "splendid example of the usefulness of the principle of collective bargaining." Apparently the President sees no difference between a settlement concluded in the tense atmosphere of industrial conflict and one brought about through peaceable bargaining which averts strikes or lockouts. When strikes are called, of course, it is equivalent to telling the world that the machinery of collective bargaining has broken down.

When President Lewis of the United Mine Workers exclaimed exultantly, "We got everything we asked for," he evidently was tasting the fruits of victory after a struggle to force acceptance of the miners' terms. Collective bargaining, however, depends upon mutual concessions to bridge the gap between employer groups and employes. It is the antithesis of the attitude that makes force instead of reason the arbiter of disputes. If the methods adopted in reaching a settlement of the bituminous coal strike are to President Roosevelt's way of thinking a "splendid example" for other industries to emulate, the country at large will be disposed to doubt whether any progress has been made to improve industrial relations.

The coal strike has also raised another unsettled question that calls for some straight thinking on the part of Federal officials. If the strike had continued a few days longer, the Government would have been importuned to aid needy miners and their families. So far there has been no clear formulation of policy concerning this matter of subsidizing strikes and a definite statement is much needed.

Spokesmen for Federal relief agencies have stated that funds would be forthcoming if the National Labor Relations Board certified that the coal strike was justified. Mr. Hopkins, on the other hand, is reported to have said that families would be cared for if they were in distress. In either case, it is evident that the Federal Government would be helping the strikers to hold out and would strengthen their resistance to a speedy settlement.

In the present instance, moreover, the United Mine Workers refused to test the machinery set up by the Guffey bill for arbitration of industrial disputes, deliberately choosing to achieve their demands by force. The outcome may seem "splendid" to the President. But it can only be regarded as a very bad example by believers in the principles of collective bargaining as ordinarily defined, and generally understood.

Gilding The Prairie Flower.

The Cosmetic Buyers Conference, convening in New York recently, has offered two remarkable sociological discoveries. The first is that the West exceeds the East when it comes to the purchase of paints and powders. The other, which hits closer home, is that Washington rates third among American cities in its per capita expenditure for cosmetics.

When a New York school, dealing in personality correspondence courses, announced last year that Washington was its second largest subscriber, the news was thoroughly understandable. Social etiquette is particularly important in this city, where a hostess must know how to quell many an argument verging on bounds of political propriety. Far less comprehensible is it that Washington the conservative, Washington the staid, is hiding its light under a bushel of make-up. Nor did the cosmetics conference advance any theories as to why this should be so. It simply quoted the facts, letting the blushes fall where they may. For, sad as it sounds, kissproof lipstick and the simulated bloom of youth are just so many statistics to their dealers.

The other announcement is no less startling. There has always been an impression that the girl of the Golden West can throw lariats around her Eastern sisters when it comes to vitality and glow. But now, it seems, there is arithemetical evidence that the rosy cheeks of desert damsels are not real, but rouge. Those wide-open faces have been painted by artists other than nature.

One can not help wondering what effect this will have on the popularity of dude ranches. Heretofore, effete Eastern lassies have patronized them, hoping to learn their virile Western sisters' health secrets. No doubt the decline of the West will really begin when it is once realized that it's just a painted desert.

Ethiopia has ordered a large number of mules from Missouri for use in case of war. We'd pay a pretty penny to hear an Ethiopian cuss a Missouri mule in Amharic.

Officers in Tennessee are searching for a man who is hiding from four wives. If four women can't find him the officers haven't a chance.

The recent Florida hurricane was a terrible calamity. It takes the motorists of this country almost a whole week to kill as many people.

Poetry And Truth.

Letters To The Editor.

From Young And Older Readers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Raymond Clapper's column, which appears daily in the best paper in Washington, is by far the best thing Washington has given us.

I never fail to read it, and I cut it out and keep it.

I think the little jokes are a new and wonderful idea.

BOBBY BOBSON.
Washington, Sept. 19.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

As a subscriber and daily reader of The Washington Post, I want you to know that I greatly enjoy reading the column "Between You and Me," by Raymond Clapper.

I consider his analysis of and comments on current happenings and events most constructive and enlightening, and I look forward each morning to his column. Mr. Clapper's remarks in The Post of September 18 on the great wordy battle that is being waged on two fronts, and especially the attitude of the "cons," over suggestions from certain quarters that the Constitution of the United States should be amended to meet present-day conditions is, in my opinion, a masterly outline of the true situation. I have insisted that everyone who entered my office today read it, and found that a good many had.

I am not one who makes a habit of writing to newspapers, and I doubt if any other correspondent or official of The Washington Post has ever heard from me, but I do want to compliment Mr. Clapper on his excellent work, and to express to you my appreciation of the opportunity to read his column daily.

Wishing you much future success.

The Liquor Problem.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

E. Livingston in The Post of September 23 complains that the letter of Mrs. Bascom on the 19th is not convincing. We write to say that neither is his.

The legalized liquor traffic exists on a threefold basis: that one set of people may make money manufacturing liquor, and another set may get profits from selling it, while the Government gets money for sponsoring the business. The interest of each of these parties inheres in the same idea—profits. No one of these parties can be depended on to promote temperance, whether you define temperance as moderate drinking or total abstinence.

If you take the former definition, moderate drinking, as your basis, then each of these parties is interested in the largest possible sales to obtain the more money, more profit, more revenue. They put into use high-powered salesmanship. Whoever advocates moderating the drinking comes into conflict with this pushing business, for the simple reason that whatever moderating is accomplished, the sales and profits are correspondingly diminished.

The inevitable result of this pushing of sales and collections increases drinking, and the more moderate drinking you have the more excessive drinking you will have.

The drive of liquor dealers to popularize drinking is full of potency and succeeding significantly. That's what is cluttering up our courts with so many drunks. The shocked English judge in Washington said: "It's five times worse than it was five years ago." This is common observation. It is nothing unusual to see more drunks in one hour than we saw in six months five years ago.

The fellow who thinks the liquor traffic is settled has another think coming. W. B. WITHERSPOON.

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation, and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

Appreciation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

It gives me pleasure to express to you my sincere appreciation of the manner in which The Post covered our recent convention in Cincinnati.

Mr. Morgan Baker did a splendid job, and it is only justice that I pay this tribute to his ability, accuracy and fairness.

Back Of The British Action.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The Post of September 24 contains a letter from J. O. Knott, in answer to mine of the 20th. In that letter he very properly refers me for answers to my questions, to your editorial of September 20, under the caption of "Two League Reports." The editorial is well written, as all The Post's editorials are, but is written from the League of Nations' viewpoint, and is an adroit defense of the League's action in both the Manchurian and Ethiopian affairs, I am sorry that the limited space at my disposal prevents me from answering some of its arguments.

I was really sorry to see Mr. Knott, in his last letter, advance the idea that, maybe, China was not worth saving, by the League of Nations after all, and did not deserve the sympathy of the Western Nations in her hour of trial, even though she was a full-fledged member of the League and appealing to it for help against Japan. And yet, how infinitely superior is the civilization of China to that of Ethiopia and how much greater part it plays and will play in world affairs.

Both Mr. Knott and Mr. Barefoot seem to ignore the all important fact that England considers the waters of Lake Tana, that flow out of Ethiopia through the Blue Nile, absolutely necessary for the proper irrigation of the present Egyptian farms and cotton fields and also for England's prospective cotton fields in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, which she hopes will provide her in the future with the cotton she now buys in the United States.

Many informed students of world affairs are of the opinion that England's conviction that she needs the waters of Lake Tana, with no threat of Italian interference, is the underlying cause of her present action. I think that when the smoke screen finally rolls away, England will be found in the quiet possession of Lake Tana, unless Italy can wrest from England her present naval supremacy in the Mediterranean Sea, which is most improbable.

CHARLES FISK TANSILL.

A Browder Broadside.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I read with disgust, in The Post of September 19, the highly editorialized United Press report of Earl Browder's return to the United States from Moscow. I am not a radical, but it seems to me that the secretary of the Communist Party of the United States, like any other leader of a political party, deserves a "square," if not a "new" deal.

To call Mr. Browder "No. 1 United States communist . . ." is to make him appear in a class with our public enemies of the Capone, Dillinger gangster variety. This is in poor taste and certainly un-American; if intentional, it is both bad sportsmanship and vicious.

My brother political scientists inform me that it is not true that communist activity in this country is directed "on orders from Moscow." It would be equally absurd and erroneous to say that Maxim Litvinov dictates to France, Britain, et al., in the League of Nations. Not even "Red Network" would say that.

The second part of the story was written as though a newspaper man and not a "trouble maker" wrote it. If we are sincere in upholding the Constitution and championing "free speech," we must prove it.

Pro And Con On Pegler.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

We are not eager to have our letters published, but we do want to express appreciation for Westbrook Pegler.

Here is a writer who is unafraid to be blunt when dealing with facts! All honor to him! His column, "A Challenge to Every Man," is superfine. We are so fed up and almost nauseated from reading about some of these rotten celebrities, that it is refreshing to meet Westbrook Pegler, who gives us the plain, unvarnished truth!

It's just too bad there are not more like him. To some it seems unkind to be brutally frank. However, we consider it far better to be that way than soft-soaping and glossing over real nastiness. Give us plain, candid, frank, honest, truthful facts! That's what we want.

MRS. R. F. TRUESDALE.
Washington, Sept. 24.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

It is "fair enough" to say that the political dope offered by Westbrook Pegler is not so nasty or poisonous as that of Heywood Broun, but "it seems to me" it must be obvious to those who have thoughtfully read his attack on Hoover in a recent issue of The Post, that your columnist is somewhat skilled in the art of evading and avoiding essential facts and in twisting the truth "to make a trap for fools."

For it certainly was not his aim to leave the impression that Hoover has been a stanch defender of the Constitution and American institutions nor that his address was masterly and timely, but to give to superficial readers the false idea that Hoover as President and his immediate predecessors were somehow responsible for the present disrespect for the Constitution.

The causes of our social as well as our industrial ills and distress are more deep-seated than the eighteenth amendment which your columnist drags forth. But he and his kind do not concern themselves with true causes; that would cramp their style and defeat their purpose to entertain while misleading the thoughtless multitude. DOC.

The Post Impressionist

One Woman Re Women.

Post Office, Saturday.

WHEN we conceded reluctant space to Dr. Harrison L. Aspenwall's audacious attack upon American Womanhood, we fervently hoped that the Column's most ardent feminist contributor would not sit silent long. We weren't disappointed.

Indeed, that feminist has written us a letter which exceeds expectations. It not only goes for the Boston physician, but it wields a Joe Louis glove against Rockefeller Foundation gland researcher Dr. Sokoloff, upon whose book the Bostonian based his baseness.

* * *

"My first impulse toward Doctors Aspenwall and Sokoloff," says our No. 1 Feminist, "was to hit both of them over the head with a rolling pin—then run."

Running, however—at least running away—is not tolerated by Mrs. Leila F. Kestler's second thoughts. "A scolder," says she, "must be prepared to take a scolding."

* * *

So then comes a consideration of Dr. Aspenwall's charges:

(1) That the American Girl shuns those studies which would fit her for housewifery, is a bad daughter, a social nerve-storm—and that, in the business world, while she demands from men equality as a worker, she exacts chivalry as a woman.

(2) That her mother is as poor a thing as the daughter—and more so.

* * *

Why, asks Mrs. Kestler, shouldn't the schoolgirl choose her studies? "Must her duties and her thoughts be made to order for her? She possesses a personality of her own . . . If, in the home, she is willful, lacking respect, avaricious, the same can be said of her brother; she's her mother's child, with a share of her father thrown in—almost any behavior is better than servile behavior. Her social aberrations result from the fact that adolescence is a period of intense strain: we can't blame the young if life is difficult—they didn't make it so.

"The business world is a masculine invention. Therein woman uses the weapons at her disposal. Man is cunning; woman merely matches her cunning with his. She has always put him to consternation. Result: feminine brains are a liability, if discovered. Therefore, much of her conduct is artificial.

* * *

"Dr. Aspenwall charges that, 'in society, the American Woman grotesquely forgets her age.' Women are tortured by the problems of age; men aren't. Money brings forgetfulness of age in men, especially in rich old men. No man is ever too old to marry his nurse.

"If the American Woman is really 'a neglectful mother and worse wife,' then the old doormat ain't what she used to be—probably gone haywire making a person of herself at last. Who ever heard of a person giving all and having anything left to give? That is the role the exigencies of life forced on woman in the past, and the kitchen is still 'good enough for her.' There is nothing more stultifying than to have one's activities reduced to the least common denominator.

"Dr. Aspenwall complains that women consider housework menial. Without love, it is menial; it is impossible. Men find mechanical routine work just as enervating."

* * *

But the Massachusetts scientist also asserted that the American Woman takes no interest in her husband's business. Well, Mrs. Kestler retorts:

"Men don't want their wives interested in their business: they want them to listen and agree—the looking-glass device seems as vital to men as it was to the Alice of Wonderland. Nor, in return for a Yes Audience to their business monologues, will men listen to a recitation of household difficulties."

* * *

"We've all heard of men who hide behind the skirts of women—Doctors Sokoloff and Aspenwall use the prestige of their profession for camouflage. No man is intellectually honest, or has the scientific attitude, if he permits prejudice to pervert fact. The things these physicians have said of women are only half-truths and, like all half-truths, convey a false impression. Sokoloff and Aspenwall assume, as do too many men, that they understand women and have a right to judge women. But understanding and judging rarely inhabit the same soul.

"For my part, I am sometimes tempted to say that Nature blundered when she evolved two sexes. After having dwelt in suffocating intimacy for thousands of years, they still manage to misunderstand each other.

* * *

Whereupon, Mrs. Kestler concludes with an olive-branch:

"The world," our feminist concludes, "needs knowledge, kindliness and courage."—Well, the Post-Impressionist won't say "No" to that.

"And, whatever may be thought of woman," Mrs. Kestler postscripts, "man must be born of her—if at all."

To which, we believe, even Doctors Aspenwall and Sokoloff may assent.

Fair Enough

Old Siwash's Chance.

New York, Sept. 27.

THESE be anxious days for the undergrads and old grads of Knox College, of Galesburg, Ill., more familiarly known as Old Siwash, the typical fresh-water American school and the alma mater of the mythical Ole Skjarsen, who was the Paul Bunyan of American football. Ole Skjarsen was the invention of the late George Fitch, the author—a Knox alumnus.

Like Itchy Guck, the legendary Eskimo swimmer, who never swam the English Channel because the water scalded him, Ole Skjarsen was a mighty athlete but not quite bright mentally. The reading public was slightly incredulous when Ole picked up a fumble and ran the wrong way in the big game of the year. But long after Mr. Fitch had died untimely Mr. Roy Riegels, of California, came along in the year 1929 to do it in real life in the big game with Georgia Tech. Thus posthumous vindication came to an author who had scooped history by more than 20 years.

The current anxiety of the undergrads and old grads of Old Siwash has to do with the remarkable string of 27 consecutive defeats achieved by the varsity teams in the four-year period ended last November. This gave Knox a tie with Hobart College, of Geneva, N. Y., whose gridiron heroes made a record of 27 defeats, unmarred by either victory or tie, during a four-year stretch ended several years ago.

• • • •

UP to the closing game of the 1934 season the students and alumni of Old Siwash still hoped for a victory or tie score because they did not wish to equal Hobart's record. But now, having tied Hobart, there is a strong sentiment among the Knox people for at least one more loss so that dear Old Siwash may forge out in front—or forge out behind, if you prefer—and stand alone with a list of defeats unmatched in the history of the game.

To this end loyal alumni of Old Siwash have been composing many inspirational wall mottoes for the varsity locker room and cheers for the student body. One of the wall mottoes reads, "The Will to Lose Is Half the Battle," and another says "You Can't Win." Members of the student body in the cheering section will be urged to yell "Don't Block That Kick" and "We Don't Want a Touchdown." The situation is quite grim because Siwash hired a new coach for this year, a Mr. Pete Reynolds, who once coached at Hobart and who is believed to have been preaching poisonous doctrines about the glories of victory out of lingering loyalty to Hobart. In fact, some of the undergrads, in writing to the old grads for money, report that Mr. Reynolds has openly advocated winning the first game of the season, in which Siwash meets Western State Teachers' College, of Macomb, Ill.

• • • •

IN the days of Ole Skjarsen, Siwash regularly played Notre Dame, Illinois and A. A. Stagg's great University of Chicago teams. In that time Western State Teachers College was regarded as a pushover for Knox, but in more recent years Knox has had no trouble losing regularly to the Teachers. But now bear stories are coming out of Galesburg hinting that Siwash is threatened with a victory which would mar an historic achievement.

The coeds at Knox are reported to have lost their fine losing spirits of the last four years. In this crisis an appeal is being addressed to the coeds to make dates with the football heroes of the varsity for the night before the game with Teachers College and keep them out as late as the law allows so that they may take the field in condition to put forth their worst efforts. There is also a movement to organize poker games and keg parties to get the varsity men thoroughly tired out and possibly send them into battle suffering from malignant hangover. This overemphasis on defeat is disapproved by Dr. Albert Britt, the president of Old Siwash, who is quoted as saying to the students, "Defeat isn't everything, so if fate should decree that we must win this one let us accept victory with a smile. We can't expect to lose them all, and I want to hear no unfair criticism of the team if it is our turn to taste the bitter cup of triumph."

• • • •

THE campaign to de-emphasize defeat just when Old Siwash faces the opportunity to establish a new record has aroused considerable resentment among the old grads. One New York alumnus of Knox College claims that he sent out a freshman last year who would have been a veritable tower of weakness, as the saying goes, in this year's team, but reports that the boy was ruled out in favor of a big, burly farmer.

"My man was a scrawny, hollow-chested, near-sighted and delicate," the alumnus complained, "and, moreover, he didn't like football. He would have accounted for defeat single-handed any time he played, but I understand that they have put him on the scrub and won't let him play against the Teachers. We need a new coach."

The alumni of Old Siwash have distinguished themselves in war, the arts and finance, and they are scattered the world over. They will be watching the tickers and grabbing the sporting finals with palsied eagerness on October 4 to learn whether Old Siwash has gone on to set a world record or failed in the final moment.

Statues in France

By William Lyon Phelps

I LEARN from my friend Bernhard Ragner, in Paris, that there are 23 statues or memorials to Americans now standing in France; the latest one having been dedicated this very month of September at the town of Nevers. It is in honor of Evelyn Graham Frost, the poet and feminine aviator.

These 23 monuments are entirely exclusive of the numerous war memorials in France erected by the United States Government.

There are three statues to Washington: Two in Paris, and the third, not far off, in Versailles. Thomas Jefferson has both a statue and what is called a "statuette" in the City of Angers; which also has, I think, the most impressive chateau I have seen near the Loire.

Benjamin Franklin has a statue, near where he lived in Paris, not far from the Trocadero. A street there is named after him.

Inside the Trocadero is John Paul Jones; while there are busts of Washington, Franklin, and Jefferson in the Louvre Museum.

Fittingly enough, there is a statue to Wilbur Wright in Le Mans, where the Ohio aviator did his first flying in France; Dr. Horace Wells, one of the greatest benefactors of humanity, because he helped to discover and to develop the use of anesthetics, is remembered by a bust in the United States Square in Paris.

Oil From A Dust Bowl

Kansas Forgets Its Parching Drouth Of Last Year As Black Gold Spumes Forth From Thousands Of Feet Beneath Its Flat Prairie Countryside.

By Hilding Siverson.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Wichita, Kans.

KANSAS is one of the most surprising States in the Union. One year ago it was suffering from the worst drouth in its history. Its western part was called the "Dust Bowl," for from that region towered huge columns and clouds of writhing silt-spume, wrenched from plowed fields to darken the sun and scourge the prairies.

Since that time abundant rains have come to most of the State and a heavy mat of vegetation has sprung up as if nothing had happened. The State is harvesting a fairly good farm crop.

The most sensational factor in the return of better times, however, has been a series of huge oil strikes in several places, notably in the Oxford area south of Wichita, in the Russell district, and Rice County, in western Kansas, and in scattering spots.

Year after year the area of large oil production has moved westward from the original fields of southeastern Kansas, until it is now out in what was called the "Dust Bowl."

• • • •

IN the outskirts of the little Town of Oxford an oil-producing company conceived the idea of deepening some of the existing wells, which had been making moderate production. The result was one of the biggest gushers in the history of the entire midcontinent field, making 37,000 barrels a day. Another well nearby was making 18,000 barrels a day. Others were following close.

In the Russell pool large strikes were also made. This is well out in western Kansas. There is oil or gas production in McPherson, Rice, Barton, Ellsworth, Stevens, Seward, Scott, Stafford and other western Kansas counties. Forty-two new tests were started within two weeks recently. The whole State is excited over the big new strikes and lease brokers are active, talking to farmers in most of the western counties about potential production.

In one instance the State of Kansas, in its official capacity, promises to be the beneficiary, as wells were to be drilled in a river bed, which belongs to the State. School districts and churches have been thus benefitted.

Farmers who have been struggling for a living on many a Kansas farm have found that the "black gold" spouting out of the sulphurous depths, two, three and four thousand feet below the surface, has made them richer in a few weeks than their years of soil cultivation. The oil money has been a great stimulus to business.

• • • •

IT now seems probable that virtually the whole western part of the state will swarm with oil derricks before many years, as the pools that have been discovered here and there are constantly growing. According to some oil men, Kansas will rival Oklahoma as an oil state. It may even eclipse the fabulously rich fields of Texas and the productive deep wells of California, if present trends continue.

Though the state laws provide for restriction of production, through a "pro-rating" system, and the general trend in the Nation is to hold down production everywhere, the future of the oil industry seems bright, for the demand is creeping up on the supply.

Commentators on Kansas have sometimes referred sarcastically to the flatness of the state. It may be that this flatness has something to do with the vast new wealth that is gushing from the deep strata of rock, sand and shale, for most of the state was once the flat bed of seas or marshes, with accumulating layers of sand, lime and sediment, and between some of the layers accumulated vast deposits of the remains of animal or vegetable life, from which was distilled the petroleum and natural gas which is now being released.

These vast layers were wrinkled and arched in places, and the accumulations of oil and gas are more pronounced in the upper parts of the folds, called anticlines. The long, gentle rise of land from the Missouri River to the Rockies seems to have been subject to folds, and when nature put on its big show wherein the Rocky Mountain system was formed, it also created a wrinkly series of oil and gas reservoirs, pent in by impermeable rock strata, along the eastern slope of the mountains. And so it happens that the vast silt plain, mostly level on the surface, is considerably underlaid with long ribs and pools of liquid and gaseous wealth.

• • • •

Some of the get-rich-quick tribe experience a swimming of the brain and promptly lose their heads, as in the case of certain of the Hollywood movie stars. However, most of the Kansas people have been hardened by adversity and when they get sudden wealth they are likely to adopt a conservative attitude.

A hod-carrier, when asked what he would do if he should inherit a million dollars, said "By golly, I'd get me a mahogany hod." Figuratively there are mahogany hods in the new-rich oil districts, for some of the people see in their sudden wealth only an opportunity to multiply their existing units and modes of wealth, whether it be land or cattle or houses. As a rule, however, there is a tendency toward the "more abundant life." Many schools, colleges, churches, libraries and art museums have been blessed by oil riches. There is a genuine accession to gracious living. After the first shocks of wealth, there is a settling down to sensible use and sensible attitudes. Kansas can stand prosperity as it has stood adversity. Kansas can take it.

Richmond Markets.

Richmond, Sept. 27 (AP).—Note: The prices quoted for Richmond marets were received by commission merchants and some others for lots sold to retail merchants, local butchers, institutions and some others during early trading today.

About London

By Edward Acheson

British Headlines.

ENGLISH newspapers tease. There's no question about it. They don't come right out with a headline that says "Perry Wins at Wimbledon." No, indeed. They figure, perhaps rightly, that no one will buy if they give away what they have to sell. Hence "Perry at Wimbledon: Result." And either you part with two cents or look over someone's shoulder.

But this teaser stuff can be carried too far. A "Times" article on the necessity for care in the adoption of children, for instance, was given the ambiguous heading, "Princess Alice and the Need for Control. Sometimes it becomes so confusing as to be downright unfair: almost anyone would be seduced into buying a paper purporting to reveal the amazing story of "Man Drowns in Fireman's Uniform."

But the difficulty in this type of thing comes in the law courts when judges, as British judges frequently do, comment on their cases. "Judge on Causes of Divorce" is common. And England, just now, is waiting with impatience to see what Sir Gervais Rentoul, K. C., is going to do about the "News." That paper accorded him the one column head, "Magistrate on a Brandy Party."

• • • •

AMERICANS who have had to do business in England under the handicap of the native distaste for letter writing will welcome a sign of increasing efficiency in this direction. A woman complaining before the Willesden police officer said: "My husband walked out of the house and sent the office boy round with a letter confirming that he had deserted me."

• • • •

THE British are probably the most zoo-minded race in the world. The leading papers all have zoo correspondents and a slight indisposition on the part of Jubilee, the baby chimp, is worth half a column on any Monday.

Renier, if you remember, attributes this British love of beasts to the fact that, being the most thoroughly inhibited people on earth, the Rough Islanders have a greater sympathy for other dumb animals. Which may be. We have no theory. But certainly the nation was stirred to its very roots recently by the case of one, Lily Greatbatch (sic).

Lily, it would seem, was, and probably is, a comely lady who was at no pains to surpress a natural proclivity for being the life-of-the-party. The particular party in question had migrated to the Whipsnade Zoo where Lily was continuing to be its life. Standing before the ostrich enclosure, Lily saw an opportunity to brighten things up a bit. So what did she do but reach right through the bars and yank a posterior feather out of an unsuspecting bird.

From this point the "News Chronicle" carries on: "The rest of the party laughed and she plucked another. Defendent sent a letter to the magistrate saying she was not aware that she was breaking the law. Now she realized that it was wrong and silly." But Lily's late and sudden awakening didn't save her. She was fined $5 and $2.50 costs by the court, while thousands of letters-to-the-press poured in, protesting against her cruelty, a number of them from members of the most exclusive hunts.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Those All-Winter Sleepers.

(Watertown, Wis. — Arthur E. ("Turkey") Gehrke, 215 pounds, went to bed today for the entire winter, carrying out his annual custom of hibernating. "We were married 20 years ago," said the wife. "The first year he went to sleep for only two or three weeks, the next year he did it for a month and now it's all winter. He gets up around Easter as a rule.")

• • • •

Mrs. Elmer Twitchell sympathizes with Mrs. Gehrke so much that she sat down and wrote her a letter today. Elmer, it seems, would stay in bed winter and summer if Mrs. Twitchell didn't fight him all the time. The letter follows:

Dear Mrs. Gehrke:

I read in the paper how your husband has gone to bed until next spring and I know exactly how you feel. My husband likes to put himself in winter storage in the four-poster, too, and I have my troubles preventing it. It seems to me you must be too easy with Mr. Gehrke. He never could have become an all-winter sleeper if you hadn't been lenient. The time to break a man of this is to act in the early stages.

• • • •

My husband is so lazy he would sleep the year around if I would let him. A mere winter's rest wouldn't strike him as any relaxation at all. I hadn't lived with him long before I discovered his tendency to stay abed except in case of fires, hurricanes or acute hunger. I remember him saying to me early in our married life, "Darling, I feel tired. I think I'll go to bed until the Fourth of July." It was then around the first of January. When I saw he was serious I put my foot down and told him I wouldn't allow it. Finally, when I saw how tired he was, I agreed to let him sleep until Washington's Birthday. He kicked about that and said it was a mere cat nap. It was our first real quarrel and rather than have a scene I compromised and let him go to bed with the strict understanding he would get up Easter Sunday.

• • • •

He didn't really get up until the following week, but he explained that he had lost about a week's sleep in March and was entitled to make it up.

• • • •

I've stuck to that program ever since, and New Year's to Easter is long enough for any man to go to bed, I think. It has worked out very well in our case, although one year when he was nervous he took some sleeping medicine and I couldn't get him up until around Labor Day.

• • • •

Anyhow, don't let it go on. You'll ruin your husband's chances of being an alert citizen and a successful man in business if you tolerate his sleeping longer than three months at a stretch.

Yours helpfully,
SOPHIE TWITCHELL.

Hero, Modern Style.

Achilles and Hector are ashes,
The Greek hosts all are fled;
Excalibur no longer flashes—
King Arthur, too, is dead;
And Hercules, strong and stout-hearted,
And Beowuil are gone—
But though these great souls be departed,
Their spirits yet live on;
Though knighthood's no longer in flower
We've still one hero bold;
Each morning he takes a hot shower—
Then turns on all the "Cold!"

Buried beneath tons of earth which collapsed from an embankment into an 18-foot ditch in which he had been working, Augustine Neara, 30, of Alexandria, a pipefitter, was killed instantly yesterday.

The accident occurred on a private sewer project at the Foxcroft Heights Development, on Columbia pike, near Arlington, Va. Neara was employed by Morgan Johnson, contractor, on the sewer job.

Eddie Mays, colored, also at work in the ditch, saw the earth sliding and scrambled to safety after shouting to Neara. Officers dug for four hours and 45 minutes before they recovered the body.

"Her game is 50 per cent better since she got new glasses."

• A lot of poor bridge players have sense enough to be good bridge players—they simply aren't seeing the cards.

A handful of varicolored cards is, after all, a complicated mess. It takes sharp vision and good light to see quickly what you have there.

And the slightest eyestrain at bridge soon tires and dulls the brightest mind. Lessons won't help them. If your bridge reputation isn't what it should be, maybe it's your eyes and your lighting, not you.

Many bridge players notice an immediate improvement in their scores after their eyes get the proper care and proper light they need.

Cafe Features Quick Service And Good Food

Choice of Six Luncheons, Ranging From 25 to 65 Cents Offered.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

IT SEEMS as though no matter how well we know our Washington there's always something new to be found. This time it is a charming little dining nook right on Connecticut avenue, but so well hidden you might pass it by a dozen times without knowing it was there.

We found it purely by chance. Yesterday after a lengthy quest in the shops for new things to tell you about we suddenly saw an attractive sign in a lattice window which said that luncheon was being served downstairs. A real oasis! So down some broad winding stairs we went into a large airy room whose broad high windows give a tip-toe peek onto the street outside.

There was something very inviting about this room. It was quiet, cool and restful. The tables with their snowy white cloths and attractive bouquets of flowers had a hospitable look.

It was the menu, though, that was astounding! There were six luncheons to choose from. One of these, a real dinner, cost 65 cents, another 45 cents, three 35 cents and two 25 cents. Whether it was payday or the day before, whether your purse was lean or fat, you could be well provided for here.

The 5-cent luncheon included everything from soup to nuts. But supposing you felt an economic streak, how about the 35-cent one? Hamburg a la creole, or panned fresh trout. Potato puff, stewed fresh tomatoes, fresh peas, new buttered cabbage, savory beets or fresh strong beans. Either hot biscuits or corn muffins, a beverage and a choice of desserts! And such desserts. They included pineapple cream pie, hot fudge cake, fruited gelatine and cup custard.

Also for 35 cents you might have a tomato stuffed with crab salad, bread and beverage.

If you wanted to be very conservative, for 25 cents you could have ordered an open sandwich of fresh salmon salad with sliced tomatoes and a beverage—or a bowl of the best chicken soup you ever tasted with bread and beverage and a choice of those delicious desserts.

Almost as amazing as the menu was the service. As soon as you're seated a waitress is at your elbow for your order, and almost as soon as you've ordered, your luncheon is on the table.

Crusade Collars and Purses.

THE MILITARY note in fashion this season goes off on a tangent with the appearance of the ever so chic crusade collars and purses in a local store.

These come in a coarse dull silver mesh that is stunning with the lovely fall colors and equally good with black.

The collars fit high around the neck and fall in folds down the front, bib fashion. The purses are small handy affairs with zipper fastening across the top.

Collar and purse together constitute a striking accessory set primed to add a bit of dash to any costume.

Collar $3.50. Purse $1.

A Real Bath Luxury.

INSTANTLY refreshing and lingeringly fragrant is a certain lovely daytime cologne in bouquet fragrance. It's a real bath luxury which has two uses. You may apply it to your skin with your hand or spray it on with an atomizer. A bit of it in the bath water gives a delightful scent.

It also has its uses as a rinse. A drop or two in the water in which you're rinsing your sheer silks supplements the soapy odor with its own fragrance.

Try it as an air freshener by spraying it freely across the room. It's also a substitute for sachets when you spray it on linen and clothes in dresser drawers.

A large four-ounce bottle of this all-round cologne costs only $1.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 323, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Nazi "Perfect Man" Search Challenges Women of U. S. To Stop Coddling Children

By Malvina Lindsay.
Woman's Page Editor.

THE NAZI EUGENISTS have set out to develop the "perfect man," one who will be both strong in body and Spartan in spirit, according to Dr. Gerhardt Wagener, Reich Commissar for Public Health. This should give American women something to think about. For in this country more than in any other, men are what women make them. And within the present century, particularly within the last 15 years, there has been going on a well-marked effeminization of men—which can be largely laid at women's door.

• • • •

It is not without social significance that men of today are so generally referred to by women as "sweet;" that both in life and in fiction a premium is put upon boyish wistfulness and masculine inadequacy; that neurotic moon calves are petted and glorified, and that so much youthful crime is laid to the urge for motor cars and "easy money."

• • • •

Without subscribing to the Nazi's materialistic and toy soldier conception of a strong man, women of America might well consider how they can inject a little iron into their sons—yes, and into their daughters. For, while sports and public health measures have been hardening the bodies of the young, certain social and psychological forces have been softening their mental and moral fiber.

• • • •

ONE OF THESE has been the mother and son relationship. Andre Maurois, several years ago writing on the American scene, pointed to the mother influence on adult men as an outstanding social phenomenon. More recently Dr. Margaret Simpson, of Teachers College, Columbia University, in a study of 500 children, found the percentage of mother preference highest among American boys, while that of father preference was lowest. She says this may be partly explained by the pioneer worship of women growing out of their scarcity in a new country.

• • • •

Mother influence on sons, of course, has brought many fine results. But it has also developed too many "mamma's darlings" and prevented too many boys from getting the physical and mental toughening and developing the self-reliance they needed to become strong citizens.

• • • •

Another social factor tending to make both men and women soft is what Prof. William F. Ogburn, of the University of Chicago, calls the "baby shortage." With big families passing and children becoming scarcer, he points out, this has become the "century of the child." Children are becoming the center of attention both in the home and community, are being coddled and surfeited with attention. "Will this be good for them?" he asks. "Perhaps it is not so good to make it too soft for children. They should be toughened; should become self-reliant."

• • • •

IT WAS INEVITABLE that as living became easier in America women should lose some of the grim courage of their pioneer grandmothers. Nor does anyone want a return of the dear old days of carrying water and fighting Indians. But just the same women of today should take stock of themselves to see if they are not becoming a little whiney, a little finicky, a little over-maternal.

• • • •

Whatever flabbiness of spirit they possess they cannot help communicating to their men and especially to their children. Nothing has contributed so much toward the making of weaklings as the average mother's obsession that her sons and daughters must at all costs have things easier than she had them. Nothing has made so many sissies of men as women's solicitous nagging.

• • • •

Economic and social problems ahead call for strong men and women as truly as the frontier called for them a century ago. Both by direct and indirect action women can stiffen the backbone of the Nation. To do so would be a great patriotic contribution.

Helping Child Improve Mind Is Big Problem

Adults Can Aid Creative Thought by Providing Environment.

The following article is one of a series on home activities for children which appear Tuesdays and Saturdays on the woman's page. Mrs. Bartlett, the author, is active in progressive education circles.

IT IS A DIFFICULT thing to know to what extent our national economic problems are understandable to children. Certainly the solving of these difficulties is an adult problem and one that is agitating the best minds in the country. As far as children's ability to grasp these difficulties, much depends upon the individual child and his surroundings, but it is tremendously important that the coming generation realize its responsibility to society in general.

It is a dangerous thing to allow children to spout about things which they do not understand. I recently heard a child using a lot of tremendous words and talking way beyond herself. She couldn't back up in her own words what she was trying to say in some one else's. However, most children are able to understand many things of an economic and social nature. If they are intelligent nough to question their elders, they are intelligent enough to understand a simple, direct answer to their questions.

Mrs. Bartlett

How can we help to produce thinking children with inquiring minds? The answer might be by creating an environment which will stimulate creative thinking. The home, the back yard, and neighborhood are the first scenes of social contact and service projects. Next comes the school. Our children should be taught to take their places in the social structure and it is with this in mind that parents and schools should encourage them to know more about the realities and problems facing society.

We can help to cultivate open minds and solicit from our children reasoning co-operation rather than obedience to authority. We can take the trouble to discuss with them the reasons behind law and order and not merely lay down the law to them. Merely prohibiting anything without explaining the reason, doesn't work with children any more than unreasonable laws work with adults. The power to think clearly and act courageously can be cultivated through creative activity.

For help in providing a more interesting home life for your children or in meeting other child problems, write Mrs. Bartlett in care of The Post.

Fall Hosiery Teams Up With Costumes, Matching Them in Weaves and Colors

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Stockings are as lively and interesting as the costumes they team up with this fall. They're sturdy and rugged to go with husky outdoors-ish outfits . . . or crystal-clear and fine as cobwebs for dashing to important afternoon occasions.

So the fall stocking story depends on the fall costume story, and there are two all-important costume influences: the trend for young, boyish clothes—and the trend for more dressed-up feminine costumes.

With those boyish suits and topcoats and sturdy shoes, the lady in the fashion know will choose stockings made to withstand the extra strain of those shoes! And this season more and more women are wearing good old-fashioned wool hose—only this fall they've gone new-fashioned — with exciting shades and smart ribbed weaves.

In direct contrast to the boyish silhouette is the dressy feminine one. It calls for dainty shoes of soft kidskin or suede, and sheer, transparent, flattering hosiery. Very important in a season of shorter skirts!

Fashion sounds the call to hosiery colors! Not only lively bright browns and coppertones, but rich wine reds, dark greens, and subtle neutral shades such as taupe and gun metal.

We've arranged a color chart of fall stocking shades. That includes a hint or two about how best to team up stocking and costume colors. Like to have it? Just mail us the attached coupon—with requested inclosures—and we'll send it along.

Factors Ruling Success In Marriages Analyzed

By Hope Ridings Miller.

DO WOMEN expect too much from marriage?

Not at all; they expect too little, thinks Dr. Grace G. Purse, who is offering a course in "Successful Marriage" at the Y. W. C. A. "In marriage, as in most things, the average woman gets what she expects. The average man is a child. He does just what is demanded of him—no more, no less. The trouble is, so many women don't know what to expect; or how to demand," Dr. Purse said yesterday as she discussed some of the hazards in marriage and delineated some of the social and psychological adjustments necessary for a successful wedded life.

A tall, slender woman with iron gray hair, a charming smile and a gift of expression that makes her words of wisdom doubly impressive, Dr. Purse has had a broad background of experience. In her many years as a practicing physician, she has had many opportunities to observe at close hand happy and unhappy married persons, thwarted spinsters and girls who worry about whether they are in love, and whether they should marry the first man who really attracts them. Furthermore, Dr. Purse's own marriage is successful.

DR. GRACE G. PURSE.

No Absolute Rules.

As a result, then, of her own experience and her observations, she is convinced "there is no definite norm of happiness in marriage, nor any absolute set of rules to insure success in this human relationship. What will prove of benefit to one couple won't work at all with another. Yet some rough paths in marriage can be smoothed out with proper guidance."

In this connection, she pointed out that the course wasn't designed to teach married women to be happy. "That is something that can't be taught," she said. "Besides, there is a good deal of difference between being successful and being happy. The latter has to be bought at the cost of untiring watchfulness on the part of each married person; the former depends upon mutual adjustment."

She also pointed out that often factors recognized but minimized at the beginnng of marrage become increasingly important with the passage of time. "For this reason, no woman should marry a man believing she can reform him, or that he needs her, or that he won't be able to live without her," she said.

Discussing reasons so many marriages go on the rocks, Dr. Purse stressed the idea that men and women tie themselves together too easily, too hastily, with little thought of anything except that they are physically attracted to each other."

Social Background Important.

Listing the fundamental prerequisites for an ideal match, Dr. Purse mentioned, first, that the man and woman should have the same social background. "Not that one social level is better than another," she explained, "but because two persons from the same social stratum will understand each other much better."

For this reason, also, she believes they should be of the same nationality. "At least it is better if they are," she said. "An impulsive Italian married to a phlegmatic Swede, for example, would hardly understand his wife's lack of enthusiasm for things he considered tremendously important. Their marriage would likely be doomed before it was well started."

She believes further that a husband and wife should be near the same age (with the husband a few years older); that mutual interests are conducive to success in marriage; that the same religion for both is desirable; that they should have approximately the same education, or, if there is a difference, the husband should have more than the wife.

Compromise Involved.

She thinks chances for divorce are greater if the woman has a career, "because the working wife has little time to devote to homemaking; she may make more money than her mate, thereby undermining him; and she is apt to have few or no children.

Dr. Purse explained that when two persons love, they not only love each other, but also the imponderable facts of their entire background and traditions. "Yet the lack of any of the prerequisites I have discussed is not in itself a bar to successful marriage," she said. "Love and marriage are not fixed patterns, and each involves compromise on the part of both persons concerned. I have seen successful marriages where there was a vast difference between the husband's age and his wife's; where the wife worked; where they were of different nationalities and different religions. In other words, there have always been successful marriages where many of the things that comprise the ideal wedded state were missing. So much depends on the individual, it is difficult to make rules."

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

A LONG sweeping feather for the hat of this lady and her six! You can be sure that there is no neurosis around that house and lot in a family this size.

• • • •

C. J. G. writes: I am the mother of six and still on the good side of 40. And by hook or crook I manage to make our big old shabby house a very nice place, if I do say so myself. But right now we're fixing a back downstairs room for our two oldest boys—they feel too big for the cats and babies and paper dolls that accumulate through the house and want to have a place to entertain their gang independently. So their father and I are having an outside door put in for their room and are furnishing it in a masculine style for a bedroom and a sitting room combined for them. Naturally it will be cluttered up with sporting paraphernalia and boys a lot of the time, so the furnishings must be sturdy. But we'd like it to be colorful, too.

• • • •

ANSWER: Why not have a maroon colored rug, light green walls and furniture coverings of green tweed—that would stand the hard wear. Then have draw curtains of a vibrant crash or linen with a good deal of maroon in the pattern.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Our household has accumulated a number of good periodicals such as National Geographic, Saturday Evening Post, Ladies' Home Journal, Sunday newspaper magazines, etc., with no room for storing them. I never like to throw away magazines, as I feel some one might be benefited by them. One constantly hears or reads that there is always a need for good reading matter in hospitals or for sailors, yet whenever I attempt to send ours, involving a lot of fruitless search and phoning, the result is always the same. If I find an organization which wants magazines, they are unable to collect them. Having no car, I cannot take them myself.

• • • •

My mother, a Washington resident, has made the same fruitless attempt to dispose of her magazines, and doubtless there are dozens of others forced, through lack of space, to throw away fine reading matter, which would be more than appreciated by "shut-ins" and those too poor to buy any.

• • • •

My friends and I have encountered the same difficulty at various times in giving away clothing and outgrown toys. There must be some organization through which to distribute these articles, and if it were only made easier through telephone directory listings or newspaper notices, a great many would be glad to contribute. Hopefully,

GEORGETOWN READER.

Potential Beneficiaries.

DEAR GEORGETOWN: From the office of Mrs. W. A. Roberts, executive secretary of the Council of Social Agencies, I have obtained a list of places which could very likely use your accumulation of old magazines to good advantage. The list follows:

Friendship House, 326 Virginia avenue southeast, telephone LIncoln 2242; Neighborhood House, 470 N street southwest, telephone MEtropolitan 4496; Georgetown Children's House, 3238 N street northwest, telephone WEst 2953; Boys' Club, 230 C street northwest, NAtional 2286; and Northeast Boys' Club, 1663 Kramer street northwest, telephone LIncoln 2901.

• • • •

It was emphasized the boys' clubs in particular might be pleased to get the magazines. M. H.

Many Factors May Be Cause If Child Lisps

Early Attention to Speech Urged; Fault Easily Corrected.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

PRACTICALLY every child lisps when he first starts to talk. He does not hear sounds distinctly. Even if he did his own power of repeating them has not been fully developed. It is only when the child, through constant reiteration, learns to differentiate sounds that he imitates them accurately.

The muscular power of the lips may be feeble, a condition all too often overlooked. The mother may have noticed that the child had trouble in nursing and required a larger rubber nipple than normal. If lack of power of the lip muscles can be detected exercises, such as puckering the lips, whistling, blowing soap bubbles, blowing up paper bags, etc., should be prescribed.

Not infrequently the tongue is at fault. Occasionally canker sores will be complained of and, consequently, the tongue will be used as little as possible in speaking.

Whenever the thin web of tissue that holds the under side of the tongue to the floor of the mouth (the frenum) is too short, the tongue can not function normally and the sound "s" will appear to be "th." This defect is quite common. It is easy to detect by asking the child to thrust the tongue out of the mouth. If this can be done freely then the frenum is long enough for speech purposes. If not, a slight incision will release the constricting band.

Occasionally jaws are deformed due mainly to an imperfect development of the teeth. The under jaw is sometimes projected so far forward that the lips do not close properly and hence there is difficulty in sounding certain letters; for example, the letter "s" will be like "st." If the upper teeth project much beyond the lower, "s" will sound like "sh." Correction of irregular teeth has been frequently stressed, as well as the importance of forming a proper dental arch for the production of sounds. Again there may be a high arch of the hard palate. In such cases it is often impossible to press the tongue tightly enough against the roof of the mouth to produce the "s" or hissing sound.

Continent Seething With War Spirit; All Whites Will Be in Danger.

All of Africa, like Europe, is seething with war talk as the dispute between Italy and Ethiopia nears its climax. If the two nations do come to arms, the black people of Africa will unite in helping to defend Ethiopia.

This is a prediction brought to Washington this week by the Rev. Raleigh Robinson, missionary, who with his family made a 56-day journey from their Seventh Day Adventist Mission Post in the heart of the Belgian Congo.

"We learned all about the prevailing war spirit soon after embarking for Europe," said the missionary, "Sailing up the African east coast we met transport after transport, carrying Italian troops.

"One colored man, employed in the customs service at one seaport, expressed the sentiment of all with whom we talked, when he said, 'Every black man in Africa will be with Ethiopia, and every white man on this continent will be looked upon as an Italian.'"

War threats, however, will not condition Robinson's program for his life work. After a one-year furlough he will go back—to darkest Africa, "where girls are sold as child wives when they are from 2 to 10 years old."

Mrs. Robinson, who has been with her husband since he made his first trip to Africa in 1914, said she saw a white woman "about once a year," or whenever she made a 50-mile bicycle trip to the nearest town.

Their African-born children, Grace, 16, and Leonard, 14, have been in America only once before—when their father was on his last furlough, ten years ago. Unimpressed by their parents' native land they have both decided to be missionaries, too. They "prefer the Congo jungles to city crowds and skycrapers."

The Robinsons, after a short visit in Takoma Park, will travel west to Los Angeles. Next year they will go back to their mission, which is 50 miles from a postoffice, and 60 miles from a railroad station. There they hope to advance their cause. They will continue working to eliminate polygamy and the custom which permits fathers to sell infant daughters as slave-wives.

Rosh Hashanah Rites Typify Beginning of Penitence Period

(Editor's note: In this article, written for The Post, Rabbi Loeb, explains tersely the significance of Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish holiday, which began at sundown yesterday.)

By Rabbi J. T. Loeb,

Of Southeast Hebrew Congregation.

Beginning with sundown yesterday the Jewish New Year, Rosh Hashanah, is being observed by members of the ancient faith throughout the world. The first and the second days of the month—Tishri, will thus be kept as New Year, in accordance with the Biblical commandment in Leviticus, chapter 23, verse 24, which reads: "In the seventh month, the first of the month shall be to you a solemn rest, a memorial of blowing the Shofar, a holy convocation."

Rosh Hashanah typifies the beginning of the Ten Days of Penitence culminating in the Yom Kippur fast. These are called Yomin Horoim, "solemn days." Inasmuch as the "first of every thing" in Israel belongs to God, according to Bible rule, so these first ten days of the year are devoted to God and His sacred service. Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur are in essence one continued series of solemnities. The prayers and meditations on these holy days are rich in conception and beautiful in form, as they are chanted by the cantor, and usually accompanied with choral music, based in the sweet old melodies touching the soul.

The fact that Israel alone celebrates this feast of the New Year at this time, in contra-distinction to all the rest of the peoples of the earth, is something at which many may be wondering. Yet this is the natural holiday season of the New Year; for at this time all human activity is resumed; the marts are replenished for distribution of their wares, schools of learning are reopened, social affairs are renewed at this time.

Chronologically the Jews count the first of the year from the creation of the world. Although there is no mention of the term Rosh Hashana, in the Bible, save only once in the first verse of Chapter 40, of Ezekiel, which is reference to Yom Kippur, the closing part of the new year holiday. The important thing, however, is the thought of the Memorial of Creation. Not necessarily the physical creation of the world; as in Genesis the six days in which God created the world is not meant to imply the days of which we speak and conceive, but the illimitable periods in which the world was made and fashioned through the handiwork of a Mysterious Providence.

Now, as ever before, Israel stands alone in celebrating the New Year as a Feast of Creation; a sacred memorial to God's own handiwork. Not the work of any individual man, or man-god, is herein commemorated; not the life story of any particular tribe or creed, but dedicated simply and purely to the God of all Creation, who reigneth in justice, and judgeth peoples in uprightness.

Justice is the keynote in the solemnities of the holy day and season of Rosh Hashana—Yom Kippur.

"Reality" is the subject of the lesson sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden text is from James 1:17: "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning."

The lesson sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Man walks in the direction toward which he looks, and where his treasure is, there will his heart be also. If our hopes and affections are spiritual, they come from above, not from beneath, and they bear as of old the fruits of the Spirit." (Page 451).

U. S. to Give Relief Funds To Maryland

Tension Less as Federal Aid for October Is Promised.

Nice Names Committee to Confer With Williams on Problem.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Sept. 27.—Fears of an approaching relief crisis in Maryland were eased tonight by an announcement Federal aid to the State would not be curtailed in October.

The announcement by Gov. Harry W. Nice topped off a day of quickly moving developments that tended to brighten the relief situation considerably.

The developments included:

Gov. Nice named a nonpartisan committee of 30 to confer with Federal authorities on relief funds.

Aubrey Williams, assistant Federal relief administrator, said he would receive a Maryland delegation at 11 a. m. Tuesday.

State Senator J. Allan Coad (Democrat), St. Marys, who was offered a post on the relief committee, said "it appears" Federal relief authorities "seek to penalize the people of Maryland because this State happens to have a Republican administration at this time." Senator Coad's statement was made before Gov. Nice announced there would be no curtailment of Federal funds and before the conference with Williams was set.

United States Senator George L. Radcliffe (Democrat), Maryland, informed the Governor Williams had assured him the State's October allotment of Federal funds would equal that of September. Nice said he thought the State could carry its unemployed throughout the month without hardship.

$980,000 Sought.

Maryland had asked an allotment of $980,000 for October. It received approximately $925,000 in Federal funds in September. It had asked $950,000.

Meanwhile, Williams wired Nice from Washington that he would be glad to confer with him on Maryland's needs for the future and set 11 a. m. Tuesday for a meeting. Senators Radcliffe and Millard E. Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, were expected to accompany the Governor.

These announcements followed a long and tense conference between Gov. Nice and city relief officials over the crisis that loomed in view of possible curtailment of funds. It was after this conference that Nice announced his committee.

Howard Bruce, Democratic national committeeman for Maryland, was named chairman of the committee. With Senators Tydings and Radcliffe, he sought a conference today with Williams. This failed, and the meeting was set for Tuesday.

"With the increasing activities of the WPA, the PWA and other Government agencies, there should be a further absorption of unemployment during the month of October with the result that we believe there should be a decided improvement in the relief situation over that which had prevailed during the past month," Nice said later.

Lauds Associates.

"I can not too highly praise or express my appreciation of the cooperation given me by Mr. Howard Bruce, Mr. Joseph Healy, the two United States Senators, and the gentlemen of the committee which I have just appointed."

Plainly worried, the Governor said after his conference with State Relief Administrator Harry Greenstein and city relief authorities that he had canceled all engagements "until this relief problem is settled."

Senator Coad will be unable to serve on the special committee. He was notified of his appointment while en route to Quebec. He and his family will sail from there tomorrow on an extended vacation.

"I am conscious that the relief problem is so important that it should command the hearty cooperation of all factions, parties, groups and individuals," he said.

Nine Aspirants Are Listed for State Senate

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. V., Sept. 27.—Seven Democrats and two Republicans are listed as possible candidates for nomination for the West Virginia State Senate from this district in the 1936 primary. The district includes Berkeley, Morgan, Jefferson and Hampshire Counties.

An unwritten Democratic political law of this section is that the Senate seat shall rotate among the four counties. Senator J. E. Helsley, of Morgan County, has about completed his four-year term. Senator M. O. Reuss, of Jefferson, still has two years to serve. The late Robert White, of Hampshire, preceded Senator Reuss in the State Senate. Under the rotation agreement Berkeley is in line to provide a senator. Berkeley's last senators were Harry P. Renshaw and Lewis H. Thompson. Senator Thompson filled out Senator Henshaw's unexpired term when the latter resigned to take the State road commissionership.

Six of the Democrats mentioned are from Berkeley County. Harry Staub, Inwood, member of Berkeley's board of education, has been campaigning for several weeks. Attorney Charles G. Gain, member of the State board of education, is seriously considering the race. Attorney D. Grove Meler is mentioned as a possible candidate. Meler, reared in Jefferson, but now a registered voter of Berkeley, was secretary to Representative Jennings Randolph for a period.

Whiting Suggested.

Richard Whiting, former postmaster of Inwood and long an official of the county Democratic organization, has been suggested and Herbert Alexander, former member of the house of delegates, is known to be seriously sizing up probabilities.

J. C. McKern, former sheriff and a member of County Court, beaten narrowly for the senate nomination some years ago by Harry P. Henshaw, is known to be interested.

Senator J. E. Helsley, of Berkeley Springs, has been working for re-election. Democratic party leaders in at least two of the four counties, Berkeley and Jefferson, are reminding him of the "gentlemen's agreement." Under present conditions, Helsley will not have the support of the county Democratic organizations in the two most populous counties, leaders state openly.

Beeler Mentioned.

Harvey D. Beeler, Berkeley Springs auto dealer, is frequently mentioned as a possible Republican contender. But he has indicated he prefers to continue in the house of delegates, where he has served two terms.

C. S. Musser, Shepherdstown editor, who has been a Republican senatorial candidate twice and who lost by narow margins, recently expressed doubt that he would make another campaign.

Warrants Charge Plot To Former Quarrymen

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 27. Conspiracy warrants have been issued here for three former quarry workers as a result of an alleged attack upon Floyd Van Metre, Arden farmer. Those named are Vernon Kackley, Elmer Johnson and Millard Baugher, all understood by authorities to have formerly worked at the Standard Lime & Stone Co.'s plant here.

The alleged attack took place near the Van Metre home. Authorities blamed it on disagreement over labor trouble at the quarry some months ago.

Weather Gets Blame for Dull Apple Market

Demand Light as Days Stay Warm; Foreign Sales Heavy.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 27.—And now the weather gets the blame for the current low range of the apple market for products from this belt.

There is scant demand from terminal markets in the United States, salesmen agree unanimously, but many cars are being sold over the four-State belt. Last week a total of 782 cars were loaded in the belt, 221 in West Virginia, 441 in Virginia, 68 in Pennsylvania and 52 from Maryland. Many cars were sold or rolled for export in spite of the market, but a heavy percentage went to cold storage. The picking was of Grimes Golden and Delicious varieties in this area, both attractive this year in size and appearance.

Apple salesmen and apple growers here and handlers in terminal markets point to supplies of summer fruits and vegetables which jobbers and grocers must "push" before spoilage sets in and the lack of speculative buying of apples at this time. Veteran handlers declare that last year many buyers who purchased in large quantities, to store and sell later, took losses and this year they appear to be bidding their time.

It appears, salesmen state here, that growers will have to do more of the carrying of the crop into the winter months. The national crop is slightly under average, although larger than last year's short one. Industrial conditions are much better in the South, principal market for this belt; and export prospects are considerably better. There is little doubt in the apple men's minds that the entire crop will be consumed by the public; and at fair prices, provided the fruit can be fed the terminals in the right proportions. So they are not pessimistic about the results of the season as a whole.

The present condition of the apple market is not new, they note. They went through approximately the same thing last year, in late September and early October, when a ten-day hot spell cut demand and forced them to place most of their stock in cold storage.

Hall Requests Pay Increase For Teachers

$5,000,000 Additional Needed to Establish $720 Wage.

Virginia Teachers Last Year Received $467 for Minimum.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 27.—Pleading for funds to raise the minimum average wage of Virginia teachers to $720 a year, Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction, today appeared before Gov. Peery and his budget commission to request an increase of nearly $5,000,000 for public schools for the 1936-38 biennium.

Should the proposed budgetary increase be granted, the public school appropriation for the biennium would be $12,928,752, as compared with $8,037,839 for 1934-35.

Appearing for the five State teachers' colleges, former Gov. E. Lee Trinkle, chairman of the State board of education, asked that the budgets for the Harrisonburg, Farmville, Fredericksburg and East Bradford units remain substantially the same, but requested an increase for the Virginia State College for Negroes at Petersburg, saying the State should give the Negro in his institution as good type education as is provided in other State colleges.

Asked about possible sources of income for the requested increases by the school board, Trinkle replied that that "is a legislative problem," pointing out that it was the duty of the board to cite the needs of the school system "as they see them."

Dr. Hall asked part of the increase in order to equalize salaries of employes in the State department. The superintendent also asked funds for school libraries in cooperation with local schools and school boards. He said "the trend in communities throughout the State is toward improvement of school libraries."

In urging increased appropriations for salaries of the 15,142 Virginia teachers, Dr. Hall declared that "teachers' salaries have been reduced between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000 during the past three or four years."

91 Suspended as Pupils' Strike Fails at Roanoke High School

Officials Quickly Crush Walkout for Longer Lunch Period.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Roanoke, Va., Sept. 27.—Quick disciplinary action by the authorities stamped out a rebellion in Jefferson Senior High School here this week and today 91 pupils were looking forward to Monday when suspension sentences imposed upon them may be lifted so they can return to the classroom.

Two pupils, classed as leaders in the strike which was based on a demand for a 45-minute lunch period instead of the 30 minutes now allowed, were expelled from the school and one of them accused by police of inciting a riot, was taken to the detention home but later released. The charge was dismissed in police court, the justice holding that school authorities had ample disciplinary power.

It was disclosed several days ago that the pupils were circulating a petition among the student body calling for a strike as a protest against the shortened lunch period. Other "privileges" also were demanded, including a shorter school day, better seating facilities in the school and locker space for seniors.

The students first walked out then named a committee to call on Superintendent D. E. McQuilkin to present their demands. McQuilkin ordered them back to their classes. Some went, others didn't. Before the day was over, however, J. D. Riddick, former principal of George Washington High School, Danville, notified 78 of their suspension for one week and later suspended 13 more.

Pupils Kept at Home, Six Fathers Arrested

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chambersburg, Pa., Sept. 27.—Six Warren Township fathers, who refused to send their children to a new school after the schoolhouse in their district was closed, were arrested Wednesday by county authorities. They are scheduled to be given a hearing tomorrow before Magistrate Shirley J. Zarger, of Stoufferstown.

The Piety School in Warren Township, used last year by the children, was closed this year by school authorities, and while transportation for pupils who formerly attended there was provided, the six men allegedly refused to permit their children to attend the second school.

Ship Battles Rising Water For 4 Hours

Struggles in Bay After Hitting Log Before Tanker Comes to Aid.

Skipper's Son Suffers Second Leg Fracture During Excitement.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 27.—The story of a four-hour battle against rising waters which threatened to sink his 150-ton motor boat was told today by Capt. W. R. Lewis, of Cambridge.

Lewis' vessel, the Margaret Atkinson, was towed into Annapolis about 2:30 a. m. by the tanker Virginia. Water was up to the engine, and the craft's stern rested on the bottom.

W. R. Lewis, jr., son of the skipper and owner of th Margaret Atkinson, fell and rebroke his left leg, fractured about 12 weeks ago, during the excitement after the boat struck a sunken log off Bloody Point in the Chesapeake Bay.

Water began pouring into the hold, and Capt. Lewis said the pumps were unable to handle the flow. He ordered 500 of the 5,000 cases of canned goods on board jettisoned in an attempt to locate the leak and caulk it.

With his ship sinking, Lewis signaled the tanker, which passed a pump line. Both ships continued their pumps until the water reached the engine of the Margaret Atkinson.

The Virginia then threw the motorboat a tow line, and, with both vessels' pumps on full, brought her into Annapolis.

"I don't know what I hit," Capt. Lewis said. "It was as pretty a night as I have ever seen, and my boat had just come from the repair yards, where she had been completely overhauled.

"For a long time I thought the boat, my son and our crew would all go to the bottom. We would have had it not been for the tanker."

He said the sunken object was hit about 10 p. m. last night.

Central High's Late 72-Yard Aerial Drive Beats Devitt, 7-6

Five Passes Completed Near End

Last Toss, Richardson to Fox, Nets Score as as 1,500 Cheer.

22-Yard Third-Period Toss Gives Preppers Touchdown.

By John R. Vosburgh.

ONE dazzling barrage of forward passes, whipped by the rifling right arm of bounding Billy Richardson, followed by a cooly booted drop-kick by Quarter Back Johnnie Jones, carried Central High to a breath-taking 7-to-6 victory over powerful Devitt Prep yesterday at Central Stadium.

Trailing almost hopelessly, 6 to 0, with four minutes to play—its running attack failing to pierce a stubborn Devitt line—Jones, irrepressible, piston-legged quarter back, of the Mount Pleasanters, gambled on a series of aerial thrusts which whistled his team 72 yards down the field to the tying touchdown.

With les sthan a minute to play, the doughty field general then calmly booted the winning point high and perfectly placed through the cross-bars.

Five Passed Completed.

That three-minute attack through the air has few, if any, precedents so far as Central Stadium is concerned. Seven passes James called for from Richardson and five of them connected for long gains as the Devitt defense strove in bewilderment to stop the sudden change of tactics.

Sharing the honors of victory with Jones and Richardson was sleepy Sam Fox, lethargic Central basket ball player newly turned to the grid game. The tall lanky end, rushed in the game wit three minutes to play by Coach Hardy Pearce, took the last two passes that turned a sure Devitt victory into defeat.

Both of the catches betokened the basket ball player, but it was the last one in particular which drew down the cheers of the some 1,500 fans. Richardson's blinding barrage had taken Central from its own 28-yard line to the Devitt 22-yard stripe. On the next play he fell back to the 30-yard line and passed a fast looper to Fox, who picked the ball out of the air and a mass of Devitt players on the 1-yard line to fall over the final stripe for the touchdown.

Player Ruled Ineligible.

The game had all the qualities of a blue-ribbon opener of Coach Pearce's regime at Central. True, Devitt's triple-threat full back, Adam Zinkievich, of Worcester, Mass., was found ineligible shortly before game time and was on his way back to his home by the time the game finished. But the surviving preppers apparently were little affected by his loss.

After stopping an 81-yard Central march in the second quarter on the 4-yard line, Devitt came back in the third quarter with a march of its own which stopped on its own 44-yard line when Frankie Grenier scooped up a blocked kick, brought about by Bill Patterson, fast-breaking end, and ran 24 yards to the Central 30-yard line. Granier, a chunky little Italian boy with a piece of adhesive tape on his nose, picked up 6 more to the 24, and Len Askin, whose brother, Bernie, was playing for Central, added three more.

22-Yard Final Pass.

Granier then stepped back and chucked a 22-yard pass to Bill Hardy, right end, who caught the ball in the clear and stumbled over the goal line. What proved to be the game went flying away with Askin's place-kick on the next play as his try for the point went wide.

Baer 'Long Count' Is Declared Too Ridiculous to Investigate

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—The State Athletic Commission considers stories that Max Baer was the victim of a "long count" in his fight with Joe Louis at theYankee Stadium last Tuesday night too ridiculous to investigate.

Told that a sound recording apparatus indicated the fourth round lasted 9½ seconds longer than the regulation three minutes, Brig. Gen. John J. Phelan, chairman of the commission, said:

"That is too ridiculous. We have competent officials and their watches never vary. We have the utmost confidence in them. If Ancil Hoffman (Baer's manager) asks for an investigation we will pay absolutely no attention to him."

Hoffman was quoted as saying he would ask that the timing be investigated, not that anything can be done about it now since Baer probably would have lost anyway, "but there's always a chance."

If the timing device was right and the watch of George Bannon, the commission's timekeeper, wrong, Baer would have been saved by the bell in the fourth round, as he was in the third.

Bannon's watch showed hte fight ended after 2 minutes 50 seconds of the fourth round. The watch, visible at all times, never stopped during the fight and showed exactly 14 minutes 50 seconds elapsed time from start to finish.

When Referee Arthur Donovan finished counting out Baer, Bannon clicked his time piece and put it away for official evidence. He used another watch in the bout following the main go.

"I'm keeping this watch as is, just in case any argument develops," Bannon told Alan Gould, sports editor of the Associated Press, who sat at his right." I always do that for an important fight."

On his way to California, Baer said in Chicago any difference in the timing of the fourth round would have made no difference in the result. His trainer, Izzy KKline, who held a watch on the fourth round, said he had clicked off the prescribed three minutes when the knockout count reached five or six, but had made no protest.

Whethre one was withheld because Kline feared his own watch might be wrong or because Baer's handlers recognized the end was inevitable, Kline would not say.

Virginia Team Upsets Tech High, 12-7

George Washington Plays Alert Game After Early Touchdown.

By George Considine.

RISING more and more as an irresistible force as the battle wore on, George Washington High, of Alexandria, soundly trounced Hap Hardell's bungling Tech charges, 12 to 7, yesterday at Tech Stadium in a far more decisive win than the score might indicate. About 1,000 spectators turned out for the suggish fray.

Before the game was seven minutes old Tech gave every indication of eclipsing the great teams that have been produced by Hardell by marching the ball steadily from midfield to the Alexandrian's 15-yard line. Quarter back Bill tossed crisply to Dick Leister, and the ball was advanced to the 8-yard-stripe. Passing again successfully, Bart's forward found Johnny Kramer over the line to start the scoring. Farmer Crimmons kicked the extra point.

Although sparkling in the first few minutes, Tech slumped badly throughout the rest of the game being particularly shaky on blocking and tackling. It was at the beginning of the second quarter that the visitors really asserted themselves. Aided and abetted by the stellar plunging of Capt. Paul Shu and Lee Fones, George Washington completely outclassed Tech. As the first half ended, Shu hurled a magnificent 40-yard pass to Stewart, who was downed by Leister with only 6 yards to go.

39 Yards for Fones.

Tha third quarter told the story, when lanky Lee Fones took his place in the sun. Taking the ball on his own 32-yard stripe, he got loose to race around left end for 39 yards. Consistent gains put the pigskin on the 6-yard line, from where Fones charged past right end for the touchdown. He tried to forward pas on the extra point, but failed.

Five minutes before the end of the third period this same Fones scooped up a long forward pass, which was thrown by Nichols, of Tech, and sprinted 90 yards around right end, going like a bat out of Youknow to score the most sensa-

Cubs Admit They're Good Club In Wild Locker Room Jubilee

By the Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 27.—Hilarious Charlie Grimm, pilot of the new championship Chicago Cubs, clapped his happy players on the back and showered them with excited congratulations today after they had won the pennant, then ordered Pitchers Bill Lee, Charlie Root, Lonnie Warneke and Catcher Gabby Hartnett back to Chicago to rest up for the world series.

"Get on that first train tonight and get some rest," Grimm shouted to them. "Charley get in there and pitch that second game, but don't worry about this winning streak. We'll start another one in Detroit.

To Detroit Monday.

"Now everybody, don't forget. We leave for Detroit from Chicago Monday night."

The Cub locker room was the scene of wildest excitement as the players danced about and hugged each other, especially big Bill Lee, who presided at the pennant clinching exercises with a 6-hit performance.

Fred Lindstrom probably was the most exuberant of the kid Cubs.

"At least I have amounted to something," he grinned. "After being a bum for three years, I've helped by old home town to win a pennant. And we'll smack those Togers down, too, don't forget it."

The Cubs said Dizzy Dean, whom they belted all over the lot, didn't have anything more than a "prayer."

"His fast one didn't have a thing on it," said Lindy. "He's one tired ball pitcher.

In the Cardinal clubhouse, the players were sad but hardly downcast.

Praise From Pepper.

"They deserved the pennant anyway," said Pepper Martin. "They've got what it takes, plus the hustle that makes a great team."

Single games will be played tomorrow and Sunday, but they are mere formalities to finish out the schedule. Grimm said he planned to use French tomorrow and probably Tex Carleton on Sunday. Manager Frank Frisch said he didn't know who he'd pitch, but that he was going to give the Cardinal farmhands some work.

Soccer Candidates Practice at Laurel

7 Veterans Among 28 in High School Drills.

Twenty-eight boys comprise the squad that have reported to Coach Wilbur A. Jones for soccer practice at the Laurel High School.

Even though five letter men—Richard Grace, center forward; Thomas Quinn, left forward; Glenn Beall, right forward; Robert Skaggs, half back, and Charles White, full back—were lost by graduation, the team has prospects of a successful season.

Coach Jones has seven letter men on hand as a nucleus for his squad. Edgar Watts, Clifford Nelson and Charles Tuttle are first-class forwards; Burns Hill, George Wenzel, Robert Overholser have proven their worth as full backs; Leo Hackley is the veteran goal keeper.

Several boys are fighting for the positions left vacant by the graduates. Those who have won favor with their coach are Frank Wellford, William Wenzel, Olin Merson, Holton Merson and Russel Redmiles. They are all back field men. Jones also has words of praise for James Smith, George Smith and Frank Howard, who, he claims, will fill the line gaps due to graduation.

Grid Injury Is Fatal.

Athens, Ohio, Sept. 27 (AP).—An injury recevied in football practice Friday, September 13, resulted today in the death of Joseph Green, 16, sophomore at Athens High School.

Cubs Win 21st In Row and Clinch Flag

Calif., were the chief crushers in charge of the final job, smashing out 10 of the 15 hits between them.

Lindy drove in three runs with three singles and a double; Augie, the former Berkeley, Calif., laundry boy, cracked out two singles and a double and scored two runs, while Hack drilled Dizzy for a single, double and a home run, a blow that landed atop the right-field pavilion and made the twentieth victory a certainty.

Jurges Handles 13 Chances.

Bill Jurges also arose to his greatest heights as the "Grimm Reaper" swept on, handling 13 chances flawlessly and spectacularly. Billy the Kid made eight assists, five putouts, and acted as key man in a lightning double-play that halted one dangerous Cardinal rally. But the most superb catch was made by the other Billy, William Herman, who made a diving one-handed stab of Bill Delancey's line smash in the sixth inning.

After the Cubs had been retired in their half of the first inning with a fast double-play, Pepper Martin picked up the Red Bird hopes in the second by opening with a drive that Herman juggled for an error. Lynn King, outfield rookie, drew a walk. Manager Frankie Frisch bunted down the third base line for a sacrifice but was safe when Lee failed to go after the ball, loading the bases. Medwick added fuel by smashing one to Hack who threw low to Hartnett for the second and final Cub error, permitting Martin to score, and leaving the bases choked.

2 Cards Nailed at Plate.

Herman made a nice stop of J. Collins' smash and nailed King at the plate but Delancey scored Frisch by ramming a single over second. Medwick attempted to score on the blow but was out on a perfect throw from Lindstrom to Hartnett. Leo Durocher flied to Galan ending the rally and the Cardinals failed to make a real threat from then on. Lee was so tight the rest of the journey that he faced only 28 men.

The Cub thunder began pealing in the third. With one out, Galan propelled a double to left and scored on a single by Herman who raced to second as Medwick juggled and missed the ball, then scored on Lindstrom's first single. Hartnett ended the rally by hitting into a double-play.

A double by Hack and a single by Lee that Dean deflected with his bare hand scored Hack with the ultimate winning run. Dizzy, visibly worn out and his fast ball slowed up, held the Cubs until the seventh when Galan opened the inning with a single, was forced out at second by Herman, who was scored on Lindstrom's double to left.

Crowd Hoots Dizzy Dean.

In the eighth Hack drove out his home run and in the ninth, as the Cardinal fans hooted at their great pitching hero, the Cubs scored their final run on a single by Galan, a sacrifice by Herman and Lindstrom's fourth hit.

Since they began their amazing championship drive on September 4 the Cubs have won 20 games with 24 pitchers, scoring 132 runs to 48 for the combined opposition—Philadelphia, Boston, Brooklyn, New York, Pittsburgh and St. Louis. They have averaged 6.6 runs a game while their pitchers held the enemy to 2.4 runs.

Today's victory gave them a total of 99 against 52 defeats and gave Grimm his second pennant winner since he made his dramatic replacement of Rogers Hornsby at the helm of the Cubs in August, 1932, and stirred his men to a 14-game winning streak that brought them the flag.

End Season Tomorrow.

Warrenton, Va., Sept. 27.—The Remington Athletic Club of the Fauquier County League and Springs Athletic Club will play a double-header at Remington Sunday, completing their schedules.

Peacock Tops Greene for Golf Title

master of all of the short holes, scoring deuces on the second, ninth and fourteenth, and parring the eleventh. Greene dropped all four short holes.

It was a thrilling match to watch, despite the fact that Greene cracked badly with five holes to go.

Peacock, himself, had a temporary lapse, after being two under par for the first five holes, but he rallied superbly. Peacock's putting wizardry asserted itself on the second hole when he canned a 20-footer for a deuce to go 1 up. They halved the fifth in birdie 4s, and Roger sank a 15-footer for a birdie 3 on the fifth to go 2 up.

Then the complexion of the battle changed. Those second shots that were splitting the pin so well went berserk on the sixth, seventh and eighth, and Peacock dropped three in a row to par golf, to find himself 1 down as he reached the ninth hole.

Almost a Hole-in-One.

The ninth is a 189-yarder, a tough one, too. Here Greene fired an iron 15 feet to the left of the pin, but Peacock, using a three iron, pounded his teeshot to within 3 inches of the pin—almost a hole-in-1. Roger won with a deuce, and they went to the tenth all even.

Peacock had a chance to pick up another hole, but Green laid him a dead stymie on the tenth, and even at that Peacock was close. So they halved it in 4s.

Peacock took the eleventh, knocking his tee shot to within 12 feet of the pin. Greene was ditched from the tee, and Roger won with a 3. On the thirteenth Peacock hit a fine shot, but it took a bad kick, and when he faced the ball it was stymied by a tree—with no opening to the green. He made a bold attempt to get somewhere near the green, but failed, and lost with a 6 to a 4.

Back came Peacock with a beautiful four-wood shot to the 234-yard fourteenth hole. The ball dropped five feet from the pin, and Greene, ditched, came out weakly and conceded the Indian Spring golfer his deuce.

On the fifteenth, Peacock scuffed his second shot close by a ditch, just three feet from a pipe. Greene was just short in 2. Peacock took a chance, cracked a "Joe Louis" shot through four trees blocking his line of fire—and lo, and behold, the ball dropped on the green, 10 feet from the pin. Greene pitched weakly. Peacock's putt for a birdie hung on the lip of the cup and Greene was stymied from 8 inches. Greene failed to negotiate the stymie, and lost with a 6 to a 5.

Wins On the Sixteenth.

The climax came on the sixteenth. Greene dubbed his tee shot into another ditch, got out, and reached the green in three, while Peacock, far down the fairway to the right, was on nicely in two, down for his four. Greene missed his putt from 15 feet and shook hands with the champion.

Greene was 4 over par for the 16 holes, after going out in 35, the same as Peacock.

Yoder had a one-up lead on Peacock in the morning going to the tenth, but dropped the tenth and twelfth, won the thirteenth when Peacock three putted. On the fifteenth Peacock gained his margin with a birdie 4, as Yoder drew a penalty stroke by driving into the ditch.

Greene, out in 40, played the last six holes in 2 under par, to put away Webb.

The Parade of the All-Stars of U. S. Colleges

U. of Virginia—Its All-Time Honor Roll

Leys, End, Only Modern Player Nominated for First Team.

By George Trevor,

Nationally Known Football Authority.

THOMAS JEFFERSON sat on the porch of his Monticello home in 1819 and watched the building of the University of Virginia of which he was the founder and first rector. He had something to look at, for architects regard the Charlottesville group of Colonial buildings as the most beautiful ensemble on any college campus. The setting is worthy of the simple, dignified structures, the Blue Ridge Mountains forming a scenic background that adds to their charm.

Proud Virginia's football glories are chiefly in the past, since harsh academic requirements discourage the attendance of boys who place athletic prestige above scholarship. In its football affiliations Virginia has always been cosmopolitan rather than provincial, choosing its rivals from the East and Midwest as well as from the South. Before the World War the Cavaliers used to beat their arch foes from North Carolina consistently, but today the shoe is on the other foot.

In view of Virginia's football decline, it is natural to find all but one of the Cavalier immortals chosen from teams of pre-war days. John Leys, who wound up a glittering career at end last year, is the only young modern on this roll of honor, though Lewis Reiss, center in 1932, and Ray Burger, stalwart tackle of 1933, are named as all-time alternates.

Virginia grads like to think back to the 1915 team which stunned Yale 10 to 0, beat Georgia 9 to 7, conquered North Carolina 14 to 0, swamped Vanderbilt 35 to 10 and lost only to Harvard's mighty Haughton team in a stubborn battle. Gene Mayer, Virginia's cleverest climax runner, was the chief cog in that Cavalier eleven and one of the best all around backs the South has known.

Bob Gooch, a quarter back to the manner born, played alongside of Mayer on the 1914 team which smothered Georgia, Vanderbilt and North Carolina but could not fathom Yale's lateral passing attack devised by Hinkey. Virginia grads say many a silent prayer for another Gooch whose passes, kicks and runs left rivals guessing, but so far his equal has not shown up at Charlottesville.

Kemper Yancey, of the unbeaten 1908 team, was Virginia's greatest full back. He had the speed to exploit his line-plunging tactics and his punts were an offensive weapon. Archie Hoxton and Jim Morrison will be recalled by graybeards as the pair who held a field day at North Carolina's expense in 1896. That canvas-jacketed eleven boasted a great guard in John Penton, who ran the ball from the guard's back formation. He would pair with Harris Coleman, guard of the 1915 team, a dominant figure in the victory over Yale and the epoch stand against Harvard. Merritt Cooke, a penetrating charger, and Walter Council, of the shifty foot work and blazing spirit, were Virginia's best tackles. Speed Elliott's circus catches of Gooch's passes featured Virginia's victory over Vanderbilt, Georgia and North Carolina in 1913. He went down under kicks like one of Zeb Stewart's cavalry raiders.

Safe and Sound, $3.80 Choice, Wins by Neck in Havre Feature

Deduce Sets Early Pace; Is Second

Chatmoss Runs Third; Daily Double Pays Only $23.40.

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., Sept. 27.—Before a crowd of 8,000, which included most of the members of the Washington Ball Club, Safe and Sound drove to a neck victory over Deduce in the feature event here today. Chatmoss was third in the field of five accepting the issue in the Woodholme, a test of a mile and a sixteenth. Playvote and Bright Phantom composed the also rans.

Somewhere in the gathering mough money was available to make Safe and Sound's odds drop from 3-1 to even money as the horses were nearing the post. And for most of the route the son of Fair appeared to be neither safe nor sound. In fact, he was next to last going down the back stretch, with Deduce and Playvote turning off.

However, with the stretch approaching, it was a different story. Jockey Lloyd Knapp turned loose he wraps and Safe and Sound began passing horses. At the sixteenth pole he had only one to catch and that was Deduce. Joe Renick was working like a little Trojan on the pace setter, but Safe and Sound was not to be denied. He slowly but surely made up the ground, and he was edging out on Deduce as they went across the line.

Knapp's Second Winner.

The $3.80 mutuel on Safe and Sound came as no surprise except to those who bet early and failed to watch the approximate odds board. The gelding was Knapp's second winner of the day.

The daily double of $23.40 proved the second shortest of the meeting and was the result of victories by Capstan in the first, and Retired, in the third. The customers contributed $12,846 toward sharing the wealth by way of the popular twin wager.

The Jones-Viau entry dominated the running of the first race, while in the favored role Capstan proved the winner with a stretch drive that took the race from Bull Fighter, his running mate. Hot Griddle was third in the field of nine contesting over the mile and 70 yards course. The entry paid $4.90.

Cania Pays $15.20.

The veteran jockey, Joe Renick, rode another of his frequent good races in the second race, a 6-furlong sprint. Aboard the Tranquility Farm's Cania, Renick brought the filly through the stretch in pounding fashion to send Dixie Dora into second money. Miss Jones was third. Cania was a $15.20 betting proposition.

In a driving finish, Retired, a stable mate of Time Supply, took a close decision from Narise and Amijo. Ridden by Jockey Howell, Retired took the lead soon after the start and withstood several challenges. The Timemaker filly paid $3.80.

Renick rode his second winner of the day, on Miss Careful at a $7.50 mutuel. The Chance Play mare was next to last to the head of the stretch, where she suddenly gathered momentum and finished in express-train fashion to win going away. Distracting, another stout finisher, barely took the second money from Manager Bill.

Corn Tumbles As Frost Fails To Materialize

Break in Buenos Aires Helps to Depress Chicago Futures.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 27.—Fizzling-out of corn trade fears of heavy crop damage from frost did much to weaken corn values today and to nullify wheat market upturns.

Corn showed at times a tumble of more than 2 cents a bushel. Bears in all grains gave sharp attention also to a break of 2¼ cents in wheat quotations at Buenos Aires and to late indications of rain in Argentina relieving prolonged drought.

Corn closed unsettled at the same as yesterday's finish to 1¼ lower, December 58½ to 58⅝. Wheat, unchanged to ⅝ higher, December 98¼ to 98⅜. Oats ½ to ½ off, and provisions unchanged to 35 cents down.

Heavy selling of December corn, a new crop delivery, revealed that the corn market as a whole was without adequate support from buyers. Some heavy frosts were noted, but lacked the widespread damaging character which many traders had expected. Predictions of additional frost tonight failed to bring about any scare effects, and were indeed almost ignored as an immediate market influence.

For the time being, demand from traders who were short of corn to deliver on September contracts was less urgent than has been the rule of late. Arrivals of corn here were liberal, totaling 154 cars today, against 51 a week ago and 73 at this time last year. At 85 cents, September corn was sold freely down to 82⅞, but then rallied a full cent.

Wheat much of the day showed pronounced strength, owing largely to domestic milling demand. It was contended that at prevailing premiums for immediate and nearby deliveries buyers of wheat futures were receiving a gift of the cost of carrying wheat from now till May, approximately 10 cents a bushel. Assertions were added that before purchases of futures could show a loss, cash wheat prices must decline materially.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Stocks Recover in Slightly More Active Trading as Specialties Are Pushed Ahead; Wheat Prices Harden; More Gold Coming.

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, Sept. 27.—Prices hardened in financial markets without much interest in business. Stocks began with uncertainty, but in the afternoon managed to pull up a bit at the sight of active bullish operations in a few specialties and a disinclination of investors to give up their positions in the leading issues. Bonds also were somewhat firmer in tone. Stock turnover at 1,120,000 shares was the largest of the week. December wheat closed one-eighth of a cent higher at 98¼ cents a bushel.

Bears had some of the gravy in the stock trading, especially in the Standard Gas issues and in Canada Dry, which was deflated a little on dividend omission. On the whole the bears were more uncomfortable than otherwise. Stock prices worked higher more easily than they could be pressed down, and a handful were buoyant, notably Radio B and Celotex preferred, and Greyhound.

The market for Greyhound has been in the hands of good sponsors right along, and the speculative element will be greatly disappointed if the pool (as the operators are called in careless Wall Street parlance) doesn't "reach its objective." The stock today jumped a few points to a new high record price.

Another stock to act well was Coco-Cola. In rising more than 3 points on a few sales the market seemed to ignore the old procedure of selling off on the good news. The directors intend to split the stock at their special meeting Saturday, action which in former times was supposed to foreshadow a certain amount of selling by those who had bought at much lower and more popular prices. Phillips Petroleum, on the other hand, acted more in accordance with the rules, and declined on its extra dividend and the calling of the bonds.

Specialties Up.

Other specialties were McKesson & Robbins, which had the largest turnover in the list, and which was buoyant in the preferred section; Stewart-Warner and Shattuck, both unusually active at new high prices, and Hide & Leather preferred, which rose nearly 4 points, and U. S. Distributing preferred, which attracted much attention at the odd-lot post with a large turnover and a large gain. Kayser and Pacific Mills were strong in the textile advance, as were Industrial Rayon and Celanese. Warren Pipe dropped again, and Pullman was forced into new low ground.

Money markets were unchanged and the tide now is swinging toward higher excess reserves for banks. The week's gold imports were large and the condition of the foreign exchanges suggests further acquisition, which in time means depressed money rate, even granting a huge expansion in credit demand. This week's statement of the Federal Reserve system shows a recovery of $100,000,000 in reserves, after the previous week's decline on Government financing, which came about through the rise of $57,000,000 in monetary gold stock and of transfer of Treasury deposits to the spenders.

In foreign currencies the feature was another slide in Dutch money. It came promptly on the Dutch premier's assertion that Holland would never leave gold voluntarily. What he meant was that the country would stay on gold so long as the government judged it advisable to do so, i. e., until it decided upon devaluation. That left a much wider crack in the door than has yet been seen.

London Optimism.

London seemed to take the optimistic view that Dutch policy would be predicated upon that of France; others felt France could remain on gold for some time, even should Holland and Switzerland join the countries with devalued currencies. In any event, a good deal more gold is bound to come to New York, destined for the fastnesses of Kentucky, before either confidence is restored in the gold bloc currencies or further shipments are forbidden.

Improvement in stocks and bonds was supported, if not caused, by favorable trade reports at the week-end. The Federal Reserve Board reported a rise in store sales of more than seasonal amount for the first half of the month, with a 10 per cent gain over a year ago. The railroad carloadings report showed a continuance of the advance over a year ago. More was heard of expansion of business activity than of contraction.

Borrowing at the banks for commercial purposes in this district also is on the increase. This week's rise amounted to $27,000,000, or about the same as the average for the two preceding weeks. Commercial borrowing, here and in other parts of the country, is far below what it usually is at this season, but it cannot be denied that trade is running at larger volume than it was a year or two years ago. The explanation lies principally in the large cash reserves of corporations and business men.

Another favorable indicator on the business position is the rise in bankers' acceptances shown for August. The growth was only nominal, but it was the first to be seen since the autumn of last year.

Anglo-Italian Clearing Plan Fails to Work

British Report Increased Trouble Collecting for Goods.

By the Associated Press.

London, Sept. 27.—British firms are having increasing difficulty in collecting for goods sold in Italy, owing to the Italian exchange restrictions.

Outstanding British claims under the Anglo-Italian clearing plan amounted to 1,948,035 pounds ($9,577,027) for the week ended August 28.

This steady expansion of uncleared balance is causing some concern in business circles, and is said to be due partly to excess of British exports to Italy over Italian exports to Great Britain.

Another contributory factor is the way in which part of the Italian exports to Great Britain are paid for outside the clearing.

Commenting on the position, the Financial Times said "There has been persistent evasion by Italian exporting firms, and protests by the British Embassy in Rome have had little or no effect.

"These direct payments mean that insufficient sterling is transferred to the Bank of England to satisfy the claims of British firms which have exported goods to Italy. It stands to reason that if British importers continue to meet Italian demands for payment outside the clearing agreement exporting trade to Italy will not only be brought to a standstill but British exporters will be left high and dry for their money.

"The only way to make the agreement work more satisfactorily is to make it compulsory for British importers of Italian goods to pay the purchase price into the clearing account with the Bank of England."

Columbia Lions Weaker Than Last Year

Lou Little Loses Nine Men by Graduation; Barabas May Not Play.

By the Associated Press.

(One of a series dealing with prospects of major college football elevens.)

There's a chance the Morningside Heights eleven may be as powerful as it has been in recent years, but Lou Little doesn't think so, what with virtually 70 per cent of his leading candidates lacking big-time experience.

Nine members of last year's starting line-up went out by graduation last June. In addition to that there'e a big question mark covering the person of captain and full back, Al Barabas. He was forced to retire midway through last season when it was necessary to remove a cartilage from his left knee.

The wound was slow in healing and Little doesn't know how it will stand up in competition. Although a squad of more than 40 players has been in daily practcie for almost three weeks, Barabas has not participated in scrimmage.

Unless it develops Barabas can't stand the pace, the team will be built around him with a supporting east of practically all green material with the exception of Guard Jim Davis, who played only in streaks last year owing to injuries.

Ends Trouble Little.

The line presents more of a problem than the back field with the flank positions apparently Little's main worries. Ed Furey, who played regularly the latter part of last season, is in the lead for the right end birth. The other wing is a wide open contest with Hubert Schulze, a rangy, 189-pound sophomore, the brightest prospect. Little is not only grooming him for end duty but for punting and passing, too.

The rest of the line probably will be composed of Charlie Zielinsky and Tony Mareski at tackles, and Davis and Joe Coviello at guards. Ed Furley's brother, George, will operate as quarter back with Johnny Hudasky and Joe Vollmer at the halves and Barabas at full back.

The schedule:

October 5, V. M. I.; 12, Rutgers; 19, Penn at Philadelphia; 26, Michigan.
November 2, Cornell at Ithaca; 9, Syracuse; 16, Navy at Annapolis; 23, Brown; 30, Dartmouth.

$200 Cup Offered At Spring Valley

OutstandingHorse in Show Tomorrow Gets Prize.

A gold championship cup valued at $200 was added last night to the collection of handsome trophies to be awarded at the first annual Spring Valley Horse Show, which is to be held at Fordham road and Massachusetts avenue tomorrow to raise money for the local milk fund and to aid the District blind children.

The cup is to be placed in possession in the Spring Valley show each year and will go to the exhibitor whose horse is adjudged the outstanding entry in the annual meet. It will become the outright possession of the exhibitor who captures the show title three times.

Co-chairmen Dean M. Rathbun and George P. Plummer are leaving nothing undone in their efforts to provide as many prizes as possible for the exhibitors and beautiful trophies are to be presented the winner of each of the 20 classes, which are to get under way at 10 o'clock.

Local Youths Qualify for Shooting Rankings

John Nolan, jr., of 719 Webster street northwest, has qualified in the junior division of the National Rifle Association as a distinguished rifleman, the highest grade of shooting proficiency. Another local lad, Roger Davis, of 3601 Lowell street northwest, has qualified as an expert rifleman—a rank second only to the distinguished class.

Of a total of 24,536 junior shooters all over the country only 70 have succeeded in attaining the distinguished rating and 276 have achieved the classification as expert.

Production Lags Partly Because Size of Federal Pay Roll Limits Buying Power.

By Samuel Crowther.

IT is of the highest importance to know from time to time the number of people gainfully employed in our country. Not otherwise can we know the state of our well-being. In default of official figures, I am able to present some revealing private figures.

Employment, as well as unemployment, data are among the primary facts absolutely necessary for the proper determination of public policy. But our information on them is alway sketchy and often misleading. The number of people employed can not be arrived at from the unemployment figures. Neither do the census returns, giving the total of those subject to gainful employment, help much, for subtracting the number of those actually employed from those subject to gainful employment will not give the number of unemployed.

In the census are put down as subject to gainful employment all those who usually follow a gainful occupation. As everyone knows from experience, in prosperous times, when individual incomes are comparatively high, all the members of a family will not work—not principally through laziness, for laziness is not yet one of our established national traits—but because the head of a family, if he be earning a fair income, does not willingly let his wife work and will prefer to see his children up to a certain age getting education rather than wages. If the family income drops, every member may have to scurry for a job.

• • • •

WE HAVE no facts at all on the character of unemployment in prosperity. Certainly some of it is leisure. If we knew more about both employment and unemployment in prosperity, we should know more about them in depression.

I have before me an estimate of the number of people gainfully employed in the United States by classes of employment from 1929 through 1934, with the preliminary figures added for September, 1935. The compilations were made by private research based on official figures and, taking into account the statistical resources and the ability of the men who compiled the tables, the results are as accurate as anything of the kind can be. Employment statistics are compiled on jobs. They should be based on hours worked. A man working three days a week is put down as employed. But really he is only partially employed—and has very little buying power. The full tabulation cannot, for space reasons, be here reproduced, and, even if it were, it would not convey much to those unaccustomed to reading statistics. Here are some of the more striking items:

In 1929 the average number of gainfully employed was 47,060,000, of whom 3,000,000 were public employes. In 1932 the total was 37,800,000, of whom 3,120,000 were public employes. In 1933 the number employed was 38,160,000, of whom 3,720,000 were public employes. In 1934 the number was 42,620,000, of whom 6,190,000 were public employes.

• • • •

EXCLUDING public employes, it will be noted that more men were actually employed in 1932 than in 1933, but that 1934 showed a marked improvement in private employment over 1933.

On these figures alone, it would seem that the NRA had increased employment. Turning to the monthly figures, however, we see that the NRA did nothing of the sort. Taking only the figures for private employment and comparing them with the Federal Reserve Board index of industrial production in which 1923-1925 is taken as 100, we get these results:

In July, 1933, private employment stood at 34,580,000 and the production index at 96. This was the mid-depression flurry to get ahead of the expected inflation and to do as much business as possible before the codes went in. In September, 1933, after most of the codes were in operation, private employment stood at 36,150,000 and production at 85. That is, more men were employed but their output dropped—work was merely spread. In September, 1934, private employment stood at 36,260,000—that is, practically the same as in the previous year—but the index of production dropped to 73, showing a still further decrease in productive efficiency. For September, 1935, without any code restriction, private employment is estimated at 37,070,000 and industrial production at 87. This is high evidence of how distinctly the country was helped by getting rid of the NRA.

THE NUMBER of public employes is ominous. It is simply out of the question for 36,000,000 working people to support 6,000,000 on the public pay roll and maintain a decent standard of living. Under the head of public employes are included the emergency employes. In July, 1935, these were made up of 480,000 PWA workers, 11,000 on RFC projects, 410,000 CCC workers and 2,000,000 employed under FERA. The regular Federal employes rose from 930,000 in 1929 to 1,040,000 in 1934 and to 1,110,000 in September, 1935. The State and local employes numbered 2,070,000 in 1929 and 2,170,000 in 1934.

Take some of the more important divisions of useful labor: The number employed in agriculture, including part-time and unpaid family labor, increased from 10,430,000 in 1929 to 11,100,000 in 1934. In mining, the decrease was from 1,070,000 in 1929 to 720,000 in 1934. In private construction 1,530,000 were employed in 1929 and 630,000 in 1934. The total rose to 840,000 in September, 1935. The number employed in transportation has dropped from 3,070,000 in 1929 to 2,110,000 in 1934. In total trade, inlcluding wholesale and retail, the drop has been from 7,170,000 in 1929 to 6,010,000 in 1934. The drop in service employes has been from 5,540,000 in 1929 to 4,300,000 in 1934.

The manufacturing figures are of especial interest. In 1929 10,020,000 were employed and the production index was at 119. In 1934 the number employed was 7,370,000 and the production index was 79, while in September, 1935, the preliminary figures give 7,640,000 employed, with the production index at 87.

There is certainly no confirmation to be found in any of these figures for the theory once more rising that industrial efficiency is increasing so rapidly that we shall never have jobs for all those who want to work. We are simply not turning out enough goods to employ all our people and we are not turning out enough goods because the power to buy is not present. One of the reasons for the lack of buying power is to be found in the size of the Government pay roll.

59 Rounds Monday Night In Benefit Show at Stadium

THE 59-round boxing show for the benefit of the Metropolitan Police Boys Clubs at Griffith Stadium next Monday night will be unreeled in a novel manner. Instead of the nine bouts scheduled, starting with the shorter fistic sessions and winding up with the three 10-round main events, the preliminaries will be scattered between the headliners.

The first bell will sound promptly at 8 p. m., sending Eddie Arnold, of the Georgetown Boys Club, and Terrell Roberts, of the Merrick Club, into action. These two 65-pound amateurs are scheduled to box three rounds.

The second bout will bring Jimmy Fitzsimmons in against Joe Dobson for four rounds of featherweight action for the championship of the Fifth Marine Battalion.

Wild Bill Howell and Baby Face Untz, a duo of welterweights, will enter the ring next for four scheduled rounds. Phil Furr and Sid Silas then will go to bat for their 10-round welterweight engagement, to be followed by a six-rounder between Joey Green and LeRoy Dougan.

A colored light-heavyweight fracas between Johnny Grant and Arthur Dantley will follow the Green-Dougan affair and then Bob Godwin will be tossed in with Buck Everett in a 10-rounder. A six-round event between Billy Bullock and Ray Ingram will follow the heavyweight tussle.

The ninth and last bout will be the rematch between Joe Rivers and Pete Sarron.

Six Elevens Enter 135-lb. Grid Loop

National City League Seeks Two More Members.

One of the hottest scraps for the 135-pound title in the National City League in the history of local sandlot football is promised for the coming season. Such was intimated last night at a meeting of the league teams at the Atlas Sport Store. Already six of the outstanding 135-pound elevens have been enfranchised, but Vic Guzza, league prexy, is anxious to enlist two more teams in organized grid ranks. Teams desiring to join the National City loop should communicate with Gauzza at Metropolitan 6878.

The league will initiate its season on October 13. In the three opening games, already listed, Northeast Boys' Club will meet Brookland Boys Club; the Centennials face Georgetown Boys Club and the Virginia Avenue A. C. engage Riverdale Boys Club.

No player weighing over 135 pounds is permitted to compete in the league.

Student Is Fined On Traffic Charge

Anticipation and trouble went hand in hand with Joseph Bahar, Central High School student, yesterday.

Bahar was arraigned before Judge Isaac R. Hitt in Traffic Court on a charge of driving on a suspended permit. He was fined $100—or the choice of going to jail for 30 days.

Bahar's permit had been suspended for a second offense speed charge. Recently he appeared before the Board of Permit Revocation and Restoration to plead for return of his license.

So certain was the youth it would be restored that he greased his car and drove it around the block. But he failed to attach a front tag and was stopped by a policeman. In addition to the permit charge, he was fined $3 on the tag count.

Bond Posted by Vidal On Charge of Speeding

Eugene Vidal, Assistant Secretary of Commerce in charge of aviation, was released on his personal bond when arraigned in Traffic Court on a speeding charge yesterday.

Pepco Expects To Move Wires Near Air Field

Official Says New Survey of Cost and Problem Is Being Made.

Washington Airport in all probability will lose one of its worst hazards—the overhead high-tension wires along Alexandria pike—as the culmination of a three-year fight.

Alfred G. Neal, vice president and general manager of the Potomac Electric Power Co., said yesterday that a new survey was being made of the cost and engineering problem of placing the wires underground. No definite decision has been reached, he said, but one is expected today.

"Several years ago the company made a survey and found the wires did not constitute a hazard despite the demand for removel," he said. "Now, however, the situation seems to be different, and in all likelihood we will remove the wires."

Efforts Started in 1932.

Efforts to have the wires removed have been made since 1932, when the Public Utilities Commission ordered the company to remove the wires on the District property. About 900 feet of wires were consequently placed underground.

The company refused to remove the overhead wires of its subsidiary, the Braddock Power Company, and challenged the jurisdiction of the District commission. It is these wires, at the rear of the airport, which are now due to be placed underground.

Crash Revives Demand.

Attention was called to the hazard during the hearings on the Smith airport bill before a subcommittee of the House District Committee and subsequently on the House floor.

The electric wires cover some 1,200 to 1,500 feet and are at the southeastern approach to the airport.

The fatal air liner accident in California recently when a pilot, co-pilot, and stewardess were killed as their plane struck power lines revived a demand that the lines be removed near the Washington Airport.

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., Sept. 27.—The Broad Run school "strike" has entered its fourth week, with both sides adamant in their stands.
